

DEMOCRATS MEET TO NOTIFY SMITH

LEGION SCORES HOME TRUSTEES

ASK RESIGNATIONS OF BOARD; CHARGE "UNABLE TO AGREE"

Would Have Donahey
Declare Positions
All Vacant

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 22.—Columbus resumed normal aspects today as the last of the Ohio American Legion convention delegates and visitors left the city last night and today after the closing session yesterday when officers were elected.

Raymond G. Ingersoll, Warren, was unanimously named commander. Other officers chosen were: Major Roy H. Jamieson, Cleveland, first vice commander representing the army; Sam M. Cobb, Columbus, second vice commander representing the navy; Frank Winters, Troy, third vice commander representing the marine corps; Porter Forsythe, Caldwell, treasurer.

Akron was chosen for the 1929 convention city. The convention committee recommended Sandusky but because of strong opposition to Sandusky by Cleveland, the rubber city was given the honor.

At the closing business session the legion went on record asking the resignation individually or collectively of the present board of trustees of Xenia Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, and called upon Gov. Donahey to "declare the trusteeship vacant and make immediate plans for the appointment of a new personnel on the board" in the event the resignations are not tendered.

The action followed a complaint of the legion that thirty-three recommendations looking toward the improvement of the Home made by both the legion and the Ohio department of public welfare in separate investigations were not acted upon by the board.

The resolution asserts that the trustees "seem unable to agree upon a policy of improvement while failing to adopt the recommendations made to it."

Included among the other resolutions passed for improvement of the home was one that involved the sending of children of high school age in the Home to the Xenia high school and not the high school in the home.

The legion also adopted a measure to seek a $10,000 appropriation for the next general assembly for the erection of a memorial to soldiers, sailors and marines of the World War, to be placed on the north buttress of the west steps of the statehouse; a measure seeking to obtain exemption from taxation for post owned property; and a request for change in the present mothers' pension law that would make it effective in every county thereby relieve mothers of dependence on county commissioners.

Superintendent C. V. Burton returned to the Home Tuesday from Columbus, where he met with the child welfare committee of the legion, regarding the organization's proposed action regarding the institution.

He refused to discuss the situation which he described as "delicate." He declared the entire matter was embarrassing to him, since the legion is supporting his work and that he is pledged to loyalty to the trustees, who govern the Home. He met with the child welfare committee before the regular business meeting, but would not disclose details of the interview.

MEMBER OF STATE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE DROWNS IN RIVER

DEFIANCE, O., Aug. 22.—Funeral arrangements were being completed here today for Newt Bronson, 52, member of the Democratic state central committee, who was drowned in the Auglaize River yesterday. The body was recovered last night by a woman diver, Mrs. R. R. Reeves, Red Cross beach supervisor.

Bronson's hat, coat and a number of papers were found on the bank near where his body was located. He had been in ill health several weeks.

For many years Bronson was active in politics. He was clerk of courts in Defiance County for three terms, Democratic nominee for congress, fifth district in 1920, delegate to the national Democratic convention at New York in 1924, and a candidate for secretary of state in 1925.

His brother, Edward S. Bronson, is mayor of Defiance. He leaves a widow and five children.

CHAUTAUQUA COMES TO CLOSE TUESDAY; MINSTREL FEATURES

Youngsters Win d-Up
Junior Town With Health Show

The 1928 Redpath Chautauqua closed Tuesday night with a program by G. E. Solis and his Central American marimba band.

Six spirited Central American musicians composed this company. They featured every type of orchestral music, from the classics to modern popular airs. Recently they completed an important engagement at Miami, Fla.

Solis' marimba band also gave a concert on the afternoon program.

Tuesday, the closing day, was celebrated as "Juniortown Day" when local boys and girls presented a popular health minstrel with costumes, jokes, songs and an interlude. This was the big feature of this year's Juniortown.

Preceding the minstrel, there was a parade through the tent. Honor badges were awarded for first, second and third prizes for the best floats, which included children's vehicles, such as toy wagons and other similar contrivances.

ARBITRATION MEET MAY HALT PROPOSED RAILROAD STRIKE

Second Attempt To Settle
Trouble To Be In Chicago

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—Another arbitration meeting, to be held in Chicago September 4, may forestall a threatened strike by 70,000 Western Railroad employees, A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, said today.

The last arbitration meeting came to an abrupt finish when a committee, representing the trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors left the meeting and ordered strike ballots prepared and circulated among the members of the two unions.

The unions had asked wage increase, ranging from 10 to 18 per cent, contending that present wage scales are below those paid yardmen, trainmen and conductors by railroads in the east and south.

The western roads offered a 7-12 per cent increase on condition that the unions consent to the abolishing of certain working rules.

At this point the union representatives left the meeting. A strike vote is now being taken. The ballots are to be counted September 2, and while the result will not be made public at that time, the unions are expected to make it one of their chief argumentative weapons in the September 4 conference.

J. W. Higgins, of Chicago, is to head a committee representing the railroads at the conference. Whitney said he would leave here for Chicago, September 1. He said he hoped an agreement could be reached settling the dispute, but that messages he has received concerning results of the votes in western cities indicate that the two unions are willing to enter into a joint strike if their representatives think such action is justified.

BELIEVE AUTOISTS HURT IN ACCIDENT

Occupants of a sedan, which left the highway and crashed into a pole after apparently failing to negotiate a sharp curve in the Dayton and Xenia Pike in front of the residence of Dr. George Anderson, five miles west of Xenia, Tuesday night, are believed to have been injured.

They were evidently residents of Dayton as the sedan bore license number 931,139, issued at Dayton, according to Deputy Sheriff George Sugden, who lives nearby and visited the accident scene Wednesday morning. The damaged car was abandoned. Blood stains indicated one or more persons had been hurt but there was no trace of the passengers.

DODGES LIMELIGHT PLYMOUTH, Aug. 22.—"I want to sink into obscurity," said Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, upon his arrival here today upon the Cunard liner Mauretania.

Tunney, who came to Europe for a pedestrian tour and possibly marriage to Polly Lauder, was notably dressed in a brown suit when he went ashore and the liner early in the morning.

The ex-champion was very quiet when reporters swarmed the ship. In fact he was actually shy.

"I have nothing to say," declared the former pugilist in answer to the bombardment of questions which rained upon him.

SCHEDULES MAILED TO SCHOOL PUPILS

Schedules were mailed out Wednesday to 401 prospective students of Xenia Central High School for the 1928-29 school term, according to F. R. Woodruff, newly-appointed principal of the high school.

The schedules were mailed to 130 freshmen, 107 sophomores, eighty-nine juniors and seventy-five seniors. Schedules for 226 pupils in the seventh and eighth grades will be mailed out Thursday.

Principal Woodruff announces that a few students failed to make out their study cards before school closed last spring. He requests these students to report to the principal's office and make out their cards before August 31.

School convenes at 8:30 a. m. September 4 and the full study schedule will be followed the opening day, it is announced.

UNIQUE REUNION PLANNED

Three People Born Same Day 78 Years Ago Meet
At Home-Coming.

Upon the same day seventy-eight years ago, three people were born in Xenia.

These people expect to hold a "reunion" at the Home-Coming next week. They are: Ben Snell, S. Detroit St.; Mrs. Emma Jones Robinson, W. Main St., and Charles Heaton, Cleveland. These three are to be honored by being given a place in a decorated auto in one of the parades and the auto will be marked so that all will recognize these veteran citizens of Xenia who are to meet here again.

Mrs. Emma Jones Robinson is the daughter of Isaac Robinson, who will be remembered by older citizens as having built the first "horseless carriage" seen on the streets of Xenia. He, in conjunction with

CEMENT FLOOR FOR PARK BUILDING IS FINISHED TUESDAY

Will Use Sunday; Will Dedicate Structure
Later

The Shawnee Park Auditorium will be in readiness for the first occupancy next Sunday.

The last concrete for the floor was finished Tuesday night. Sheet piling is being rapidly put on for the roof and the work of putting on the asbestos shingles was started Wednesday morning. It has almost been a record breaker in the matter of quick construction, but it is a building that should last for a hundred years, being fire-proof and almost indestructible.

The scaffolding at the front and sides of the building will be taken down the latter part of this week and the place cleaned up and put in order for the Home-Coming. It is probable that the roof will not be quite completed as to the shingles but the sheeting will all be on and will provide ample shelter.

A thousand chairs will be obtained in Columbus and trucks will be sent after them and these will be placed in the auditorium so that there will be ample seating capacity. The Xenia Garden Club has arranged for the purchase of benches for the park to a seating capacity of one hundred persons.

The auditorium will not be dedicated during the Home-Coming, as it is still incomplete, and in all probability there will still be a debt hanging over it. It is therefore planned for the committee to hold this dedicatory service a little later, when the building is entirely complete and sufficient money has been obtained to lift the debt. There is still a deficit of about $2,000 and it is hoped that all pledges will be paid promptly and that persons who have not yet contributed will come to headquarters and make a donation. It has been almost impossible to see everybody personally and the Home-Coming committee trusts that any who have been overlooked will come forth with subscriptions.

The sum of $100 has been set aside for a bronze tablet which will contain the names of those who have contributed $500 or more to the building, and will be placed in a prominent place on one of the pillars. This will not be ready for the Home-Coming, but a placard will be used instead so that these generous contributors will be given due credit during the Home-Coming season.

Visitors to the park are enthusiastic over the beauty of the building. In its setting of green it looks classic and with its red roof towering back of the trees, it will make a charming picture. At certain times its reflection is cast in the lagoon and one visitor remarked: "Lincoln Memorial in Washington has nothing on us."

AUTOIST KILLED

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Aug. 22.—George Green, 40, pottery worker, was instantly killed today when the car in which he was a passenger and driven by Laird Smith a pottery superintendent, skidded into street car tracks at Newell near here and crashed over a seventy-five foot embankment. Green's skull was crushed while Smith escaped with minor injuries.

HOOVER DEDICATES SERVICES TO IMPROVEMENT OF U. S. HOMES

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Aug. 22.—

Assuming the role of a crusader for the development of American family life, Herbert Hoover today dedicated his services as president, it elected, to the improvement of American homes.

The Republican nominee took this pledge at his birthplace in West Branch, Iowa. The subject seemed so close to his heart that he diverted from his first farm speech to discuss it.

"The solution of these problems (confronting our country) has but one purpose," he said. "That is, the comfort and welfare of the American family and the American home. The family is the unit of American life, and the home is the sanctuary of moral inspiration and of the American spirit. The true conception of America is not a country of 110,000,000 people, but a nation of 23,000,000 families living in 23,000,000 homes. I pledge my service to these homes."

In his visit to Iowa and especially at his birthplace, Hoover revealed an emotional side almost unknown to the public. In talking of his early days here, and his departure for the west as a penniless orphan, tears came to the nominee's eyes. To his friends, he praised the opportunities of the mid-west in no uncertain terms.

In his farm speech, Hoover created a small sensation by tendering the olive branch to former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, who denounced the Republican farm plank after the Kansas City convention rejected the equalization fee. Hoover publicly asked Lowden to participate in the farm conference he will call, if elected, to find a solution for agricultural depression. After saying he recognized the value of the farm aid efforts of various leaders, Hoover added:

"Outstanding farmers, such as Governor Lowden, will be asked to join in the search for common ground upon which we can act."

Hoover devoted most of his speech to stressing the necessity for inland waterway development. He declared waterways would reduce transportation costs on farm products while building up the mid-west to such a degree that industry generally and the railroads, too would benefit. Under present conditions, he said, "a row of toll gates" have been placed around the mid-west. Construction of the Lawrence waterway and waterways from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, he said, would bring a "seven to ten per cent saving per bushel." Such a saving, he declared would "force upward the price of the whole crop."

Hoover urged the farmers to adopt "modern business methods" in marketing their crops. This was predicted by International News Service and the nominee will devote a speech in the future to this subject alone.

The nominee faced a busy program for the next two days. He left West Branch early this morning, motoring here by way of Iowa City. The citizenry of the latter city appeared to have turned out en masse to cheer Hoover as he rode through the early decorated streets.

Hoover's first action here, after a parade through the streets, was to review a parade of boys and girls at Bruce, an estate near the city. The remainder of the day was to be devoted to farm conferences.

Gen. Benson W. Hough, Columbus, will preside as chairman at the closing exercises, which will begin at 7 o'clock.

TWO HURT WHEN TANK EXPLODES

DAYTON, O., Aug. 22.—An acetylene gas tank explosion in the Pennsylvania Coal and Iron Company's yard at First and Conover Sts. last night shattered windows in the neighborhood, resulted in two small fires and caused a near panic among residents whose homes were rocked by the detonation.

Hundreds of persons rushed from their homes into nearby streets and hindered the progress of fire companies, police cars and private ambulances.

Fire officials, after investigation, forwarded the theory that a small bonfire had heated the acetylene tank, resulting in an expansion of the pressure and the terrific explosion.

Samuel Flavors, colored, of 141 Edison Ave., was sweeping in front of the junk company when the explosion occurred and was thrown from his feet, he said.

Andrew Balog, 1359 West Fifth St., suffered a slight laceration on his left cheek when a small piece of metal hurled by the blast struck him when standing in the back yard of his home, more than 200 yards distant.

PARTY PATRIARCHS GATHER IN ALBANY TO HONOR NOMINEE

Hotels Filled For Ceremony; Starts 7 p. m.
Xenia Time

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The legions of Democracy assembled here today in gala spirit from the four corners of the land to confer the laurels of party leadership upon "the happy warrior" brow of Governor Alfred E. Smith.

By twos and by sixes they came in automobiles, by dozens and by scores in a seemingly endless line of motor buses, by hundreds and by thousands in special cars and special trains over every rail artery to the capitol of the Empire state.

Party patriarchs came in high hats and frock coats to honor a new leader. Democrats from the precincts of every state came in holiday spirit and workaday apparel to voice their enthusiasm for the triumph of the man who rose to national leadership from the selling stalls of Fulton fish market. Voters and citizens came by thousands to see a colorful spectacle and to cheer the man they know as "Al."

The formal ceremonies of notification were scheduled for the historic steps of the state capitol at 6 o'clock, Eastern Daylight Saving time, but the early dawn found the carnival spirit already in possession of Albany's streets. A mile from the capitol, street hawkers, with banners, badges and buttons were busy at daylight, peddling their gala-day wares to an unbroken line of motor cars groping their way through the snail-paced traffic.

Hotels had long since given up the struggle and army cots were pressed into service at midnight to solve the housing problem of the visitors.

Restaurants, by keeping chafers over their broths and puddings for eighteen hours, managed to accommodate everyone in the end, but the finer distinctions between breakfast and luncheon were unrecognizable in the early morning of the day in the name of Democracy's big whoopee.

There were official police estimates that the visiting throng numbered about 100,000, but that obviously could not have included the marching bands of Hawaiian string quartets whose members kept the bunting fluttering on State Street from 7 o'clock onward with the high melody of "Aloha, Aloha" from New York, rendered with slightly hoarse voices.

It was an "Al Smith break" on the weather according to the early morning prognostications of Gustav Lindgren, veteran republican forecaster of the Albany weather Bureau. A storm area, which gathered in the vicinity yesterday afternoon moved eastward so briskly during the night that the regular morning bulletin was issued from "cloudy with probable showers" to "fair in the afternoon and evening, with moderate southerly winds."

The program arranged for the capital steps will require about three hours. Bands will begin playing for the assembling throngs at 6 o'clock daylight time, and halt an hour later, the Sousa band of New York, will play a series of songs associated with the history of the party and candidate.

At 7 o'clock, Governor Smith is scheduled to walk down the broad granite steps to the speakers' platform, to the bugle salute of "assembly" and the band's strident "Hail To The Chief."

When the governor is received at the platform by Chairman Raskob there is to be a pause for the rendition of the combined musical forces of the "Sidewalks of New York." Chairman Raskob, who is to preside, will then present the Rev. John N. Roney, canon of All Saints' Protestant Episcopal Church, who will pronounce the invocation.

Mayor John Boyd Thacher will next welcome the multitudes.

United States Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the notification committee appointed by the Houston convention, will then deliver his brief address formally apprising Governor Smith of his selection as party standard bearer. At 7:30 p. m. Eastern Daylight Time, Governor Smith is to begin his speech of acceptance, over a nationwide radio hookup of more than 100 stations. The speech is expected to require about an hour and a half.

The benediction will be invoked by the Rev. Monsignor Joseph A. Delaney, vicar-general of the Catholic diocese of Albany.

HOME TO WELCOME HOME-COMERS HERE

Anyone attending the Greene County Home-Coming will be welcomed at the O. S. and S. O. Home, Superintendent C. V. Burton announced Wednesday.

The Home will be open to visitors during the coming week, and returning Greene Countians will receive the hospitality of the Home officials.

WELCOME, HOME - COMERS

In another week, Xenia will be flooded with former residents, returning to their old home in response to invitations to attend the Greene County Home-Coming.

They will come into Xenia by train and auto, agape at the changes time has wrought here.

They will find that they can travel to almost any section of the city on well-paved streets, or walk anywhere they want to go without getting off a cement sidewalk.

They will learn that both sanitary and storm sewer service has been extended to all of these outlying regions, that water plugs are available for fire protection, that electric street lights stretching to the corporation limits replace the gas lamps and arc-lights of several years ago, that Xenia's water system is of the finest and is municipally owned.

They will discover that these streets are daily cleaned and washed, that pride has been taken in re-building or re-modeling Xenia's downtown business buildings, that Xenia's stores are handsomely housed, up-to-date in merchandise in both quality and quantity.

They will wander delighted through Xenia's new Shawnee Park, inspect the new auditorium, view the new Central High and East High buildings, inspect the new Masonic Temple, see the Cox Memorial Athletic Field that has replaced the rented fields of years ago.

They will stand amazed at the pride Xenia householders have been taking in beautifying their properties, in the care and time and effort that has been put into beautiful lawns and flower gardens.

These folks are home-comers—former Xenians, but they will revel in the atmosphere of a new Xenia alive to the march of progress, keen to take advantage of the new and the ultra in the matters of municipal excellence.

Hundreds of questions will leap to their lips—questions of "how" and questions of "why".

Xenians, answering "why," will tell them that here is an indication of the new order of things—the evidence of a new spirit of civic pride, of municipal patriotism, of community co-operation.

Answering "how", they will point to sacrifice. Everything that has been done represents money, time and effort spent. The matter of money is a matter of taxes and tax returns are based on property investment. This fact makes corporations, manufacturers, merchants, heaviest contributors to the budget of public moneys.

Merchants, constantly improving and enlarging their businesses, increase their tax liabilities. By this means they are paying for the paved streets and sidewalks you use, for the service advantages which help make you comfortable, for the fire and police protection you are accorded, for the education given your children.

The average tax-payer, paying on a $5,000 property valuation, must pay approximately $150 a year in taxes. That is probably one-tenth of the salary of the teacher who is helping give his child an education; it is approximately one one-hundredth of the expense involved in insuring that citizen police and fire protection; it is only a fraction of the great expense involved in providing for each citizen the comforts, advantages and municipal services of urban existence.

Who makes up the difference? The answer, of course, is the large tax-payer—the man whose investment here makes his tax liability large enough to make up for the small tax-payer or the non-tax-payer.

And not the least of these are the merchants, who are constantly increasing their tax liability by constantly providing bigger and better stores in which you enjoy the advantages of quality merchandise at prices which high rents and overhead prevent the big city merchant from matching.

And not the least of the non-tax-payers are those merchants in other cities who attempt to lure Xenia's dollar away from Xenia's merchants to the end that Xenia's streets, sewers, parks, police and fire protection and school system, will suffer.

Let pride in Xenia reflect in the spirit in which Xenians greet home-comers next week.

LET THE GOLDEN RULE PREVAIL.

Poems that Live

"KIND ARE HER ANSWERS"

KIND are her answers.
But her performance
keeps no day;
Breaks time, as dancers
From their own music when they stray.
All her free favors
And smooth words wing my
hopes in vain.
O, did ever voice so sweet but only feign?
Can true love yield such delay,
Converting joy to pain?

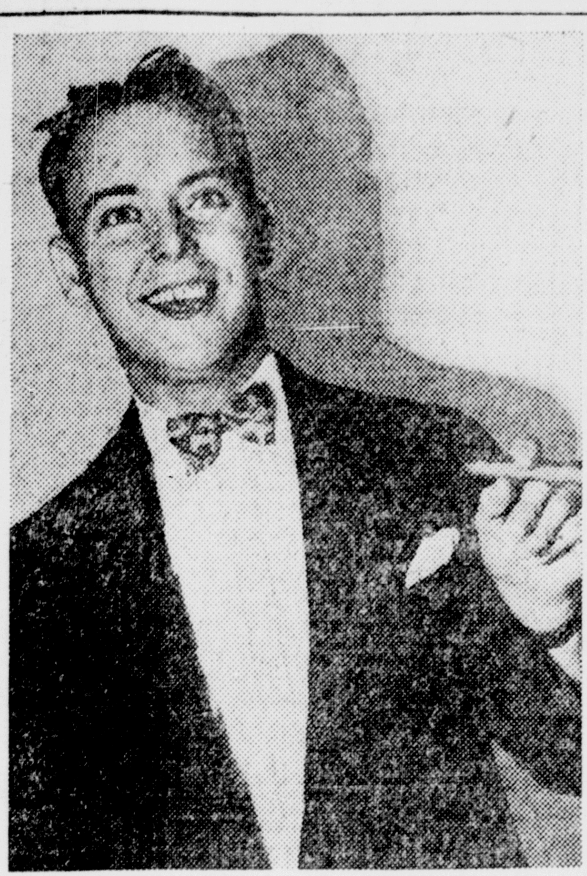

Lost is our freedom
When we submit to women so:
Why do we need 'em
When, in their best, they work
our woe?
There is no wisdom
Can alter ends by fate pre-
fixed.
O, why is the good of man with evil mixed?
Never were days yet called two
But one night went betwixt.

FILM NEWLYWEDS IN LOS ANGELES

As they alighted in Los Angeles from the train on which they were married at Albuquerque, N. M., William C. DeMille, movie producer and his bride, the former Clara Beranger, scenarist, posed for this picture. They were married four days after DeMille's first wife obtained her final decree of divorce.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE PURE WORD—Every word of God is pure: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him.—Prov. 30:5.

POPULAR PASTIME

Turning on Thompson has become the most popular of Chicago's pastimes. Erstwhile supporters of and shouters for "Big Bill," who enjoyed his favor and were proud to be known as members of his organization, are running away from him like ants from a kerosene drenched hill.

Those who condoned Thompson's misgovernment of Chicago are now saying it was a mistake to entrust him with the grave responsibilities of office. Men who grinned at his baiting of Superintendent Andrew, dolefully deplore the blight which Thompson put on the schools. There is indignation where there was indulgence for Thompson's clowning of the part he was cast to play. There is mock horror over the disclosures of incompetency, extravagance and waste for which Thompson must answer.

If there be any real sympathy for Thompson it comes from those who have consistently opposed him in politics. Persons who have felt all along that Thompson's finish would be in humiliation, and who have done what they could to prevent his elevation to the height from which he has fallen, doubtless feel sorry for him. Their compassion he may spurn, but he ought to get a measure of satisfaction out of their contempt for his disloyal double-crossing followers.

FRENCH WOMEN'S WAR

The war widows of France and the spinsters of the nation have taken up arms against each other and the government is seeking a Solomon. The casus belli is the government pension granted the widows so long as they do not remarry. The widows are protesting discontinuance of the pension upon remarriage on the grounds that the government is under obligation to them for the loss of their first husbands and that, by remarrying, they are offering to aid France's declining birth rate.

But the unmarried women of the nation have advanced an argument that the government is finding hard to answer. They assert they are just as able as the widows to aid the birth rate as just as willing, if they can find husbands. Pensioning the remarried widows would be, in effect, a subsidy for them which would further enhance their attractiveness and make them formidable rivals in the matrimonial market, it is argued.

The widows have effected a strong organization while the maids have contented themselves with random, albeit disconcerting shots at the government. Officialdom, made up of men naturally gallant (a racial trait) may be pardoned if it appears disconcerted and somewhat ruffled. There seems little that can be done about it except to make a decision one way or the other and then keep out of sight until the storm subsides.

GETTING "BACK TO NATURE"

Most normal people have periods when they want to camp out. The life of settled homes seems tiresome to them. Nothing makes a boy happier than to give him a tent. If he can't camp in some good swimming and fishing place, he will put it out in the back yard, and be infinitely happier sleeping on a hard bed than he is on his springs in the home.

Our homes of today, which should have seemed so luxurious to our grandparents, make us too soft. People's experience is not complete unless they have tried camping out in some plain resort where they have to do their own work and live in a somewhat primitive way. The open air and vigorous work make it an invigorating experience.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE BIG PENNY

Most of us find it hard to be convinced that a penny has any value. It seems too small to be reckoned with. Buy a cigar and the clerk will either give you a little pack of matches or sell you quite a box of them for a cent. Who could make any money out of pennies? The facts about a penny business may give us something to think about. The gross business of the 18 match manufacturing concerns in this country in one year was nearly $25,000,000. These plants paid out more than $4,000,000 in wages. Don't fail to respect the power of the penny.

THE COST OF SICKNESS

What is it costing you a year to be ill? A report to the International Conference of Social Work estimates illness in the United States costs each family $134.68 a year. Cost per person is estimated at $31.08. It would be interesting to know how much our bills for sickness might be cut down by a little more common sense and will power in the matter of eating and sleeping.

TOLERANCE OF DRESS

The lock of tolerance for individuality is a pretty sad thing. We read that one of the principal cities of Bolivia passed a law that the native Indian inhabitants of the city must abandon their bright colored skirts, odd hats, and other quaint apparel which they have been wearing for hundreds of years, and must adopt the European fashion of dress, like the rest of us. That's too bad. Little by little all the folks of the earth are being standardized. In time they will be alike, from rubber boots to religion. This is the ideal of the professional "hundred per center." It's a narrow attitude which cares little for beauty, for freedom, and for self-expression.

CONTACT

Call on as many people as you can. Talk to them face to face. Do all the business you can by personal contact. This ought to be advice for salesmen. Letters and telephone talks lose much business. If you don't believe in the power of contact, think what the traveling of the Prince of Wales has meant in good will to the British empire.

The Diary

of a

New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK. — The airplane is having a notable effect on New York skyscraper architecture. Designers of big buildings mindful that from now on such structures will be viewed from new angles by air travelers, are taking another dimension into consideration in drawing plans.

More attention is being paid to color. This note isn't new, for the American Radiator building with its impressive black and gold stripings, gave other architects ideas; but the terra cotta people are working overtime now, meeting the demands for bright colors for skyscrapers.

Half a dozen tall structures in the metropolis have aerial beacons, and the possibility of future use of roofs for landing is being considered by the architects in the designs for all towers of commerce.

Most of New York's busiest corners, which without a doubt are the busiest in the world, are not in the so-called downtown district, but in outlying sections. For instance, Broadway and Ninety-sixth street.

More than 4,000 vehicles pass there between 5 and 6 p. m., on an average.

A large subway station is located there, and it is a stop on a municipal bus route, so that probably a total of 100,000 to 150,000 persons mingle in the traffic at that point in the hour.

Gene Tunney's much publicized knowledge of Shakespearean drama isn't the "bank" as many suspect. A friend of mine was present at a luncheon given for the champion a few days after his retirement from the ring was announced, and on being presented to the fighter recited a Shakespearean quotation he considered appropriate to the occasion. Incidentally, the lines were about the only ones by the Bard of Avon my friend knew.

Tunney smiled, said, "That's from 'The Tempest'!" and continued the quotation for 10 or 15 additional lines.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., is one of the pillars of the Baptist church, but one of his closest friends is the Rev. Father Patrick J. Lennon, pastor of St. Cecilia's Roman Catholic church, in 105th street. He is often a Rockefeller house guest. Well, Father Lennon has never asked a contribution from Mr. Rockefeller, who is the largest contributor to church funds and philanthropic organizations in the world; and he doesn't want one.

"I don't believe in a church looking to a rich man to bear its expenses. I've seen a good many of these churches built by rich men, memorial churches for instance. The people don't care for them. They don't feel that the church belongs to them. I don't mean that the rich man shouldn't give something, but only his part."

Father Lennon says he and Mr. Rockefeller never discuss religion.

Of all the heartless rackets practiced in New York on the runway, the most brutal, it seems to me, is one aimed at jobless persons. Agencies or concerns insert fake help wanted advertisements in newspapers, and attract unemployed men and women to an office where they are asked to put up bond money, or make a deposit on a uniform, or to buy goods which is to be resold "at a profit." In most cases the applicant is deceived and victimized.

Newspapers make every effort to eliminate such advertising, but find it difficult to prevent it.

Widows forced to seek work in middle age are particularly prey of the racketeers, who frequently obtain the insurance nest egg of a newly bereaved wife who believes she is securing herself against want by becoming a "specialty saleswoman" or an investor in a "tea room."

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

The most exciting book I have read in several months is called "Political Myths and Economic Realities." I found it exciting because, like an adventure story, it contained elements of surprise. In every chapter I was surprised to find how many of my beliefs did not tally with what appear to be facts.

I had so many notions upset that reading the book was like riding one of those trick vehicles at Coney Island.

I wonder why it is that we usually hunt up acquaintances who think on most subjects exactly as we do, and read mainly authors who agree with us? Why do conservatives read conservative papers and radicals radical papers? Why wouldn't it be more fun to get the thrill of bumping into the unexpected?

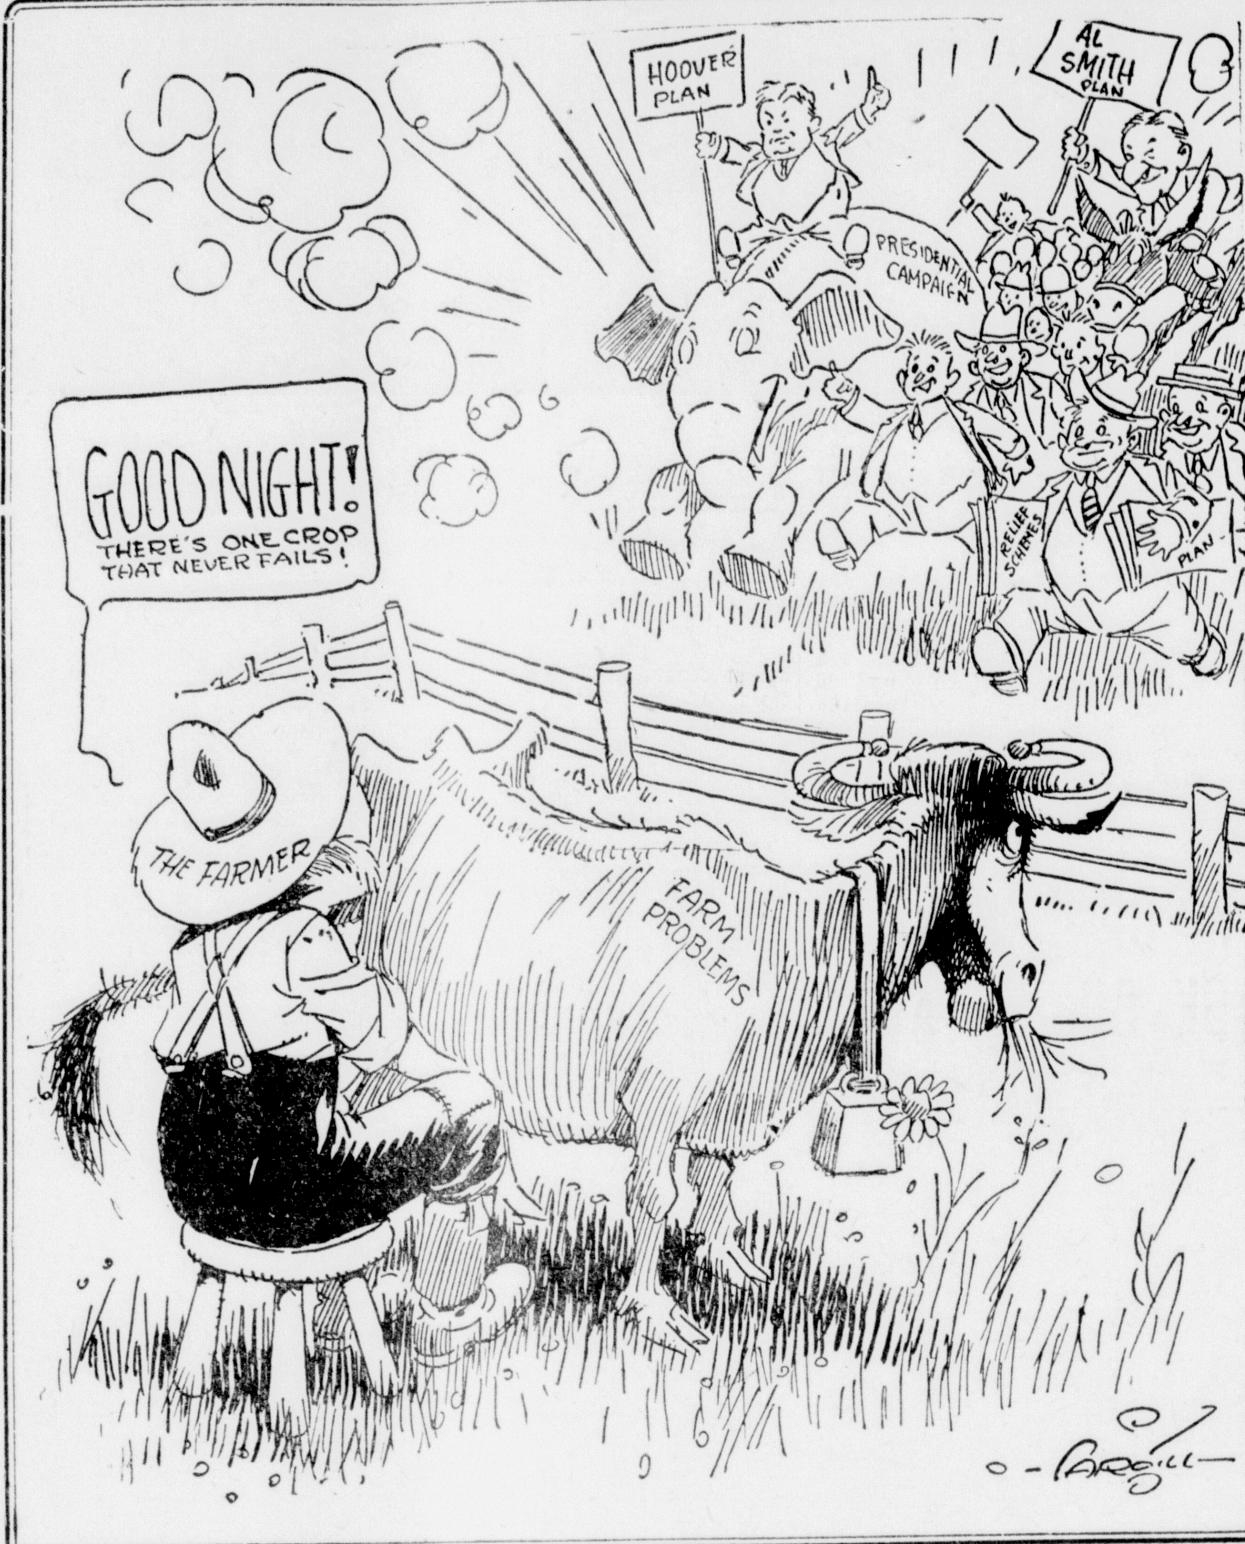

POPULAR KELLY

Fred C. Kelly, who writes the daily Kellygrams feature for Central Press, is in greater demand than ever as a national writer. Snatching off time between Kellygrams and a new book going to press, he has written articles for The Nation's Business and Cosmopolitan. Readers everywhere know Kelly.

There are a good many people who can perfectly well be trusted, if they pay for their goods in advance.

Formerly people used to ask locks of hair from their friends, but now they demand the scalps of the politicians.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Language of Your Hands

It is strange how our hands betray the very essence of our beings. Not only through the thousand different attitudes, gestures and finger positions, but in other languages so deeply ingrained that the study of them has become a science.

Whatever the differences of opinion in respect to palmistry, and those differences have been wide and indeed, there is no doubt in the mind of one who has even dabbled in the art that there are certain peculiarities in the markings of each hand which indicate certain traits of character. I never knew a woman who was not interested in the subject of palmistry, and because of this, even though I am no palmist and am digressing somewhat, I am going to tell you today just a little about its principles.

Its origin antedates the earliest human records. According to its teachings, there are seven types of hands:

1. The elementary—large palm.
2. The spatulate—long fingered.
3. The artistic, or conical hand.
4. The useful, or square hand.
5. The psychic, or pointed hand.
6. The philosophic, or knotted hand.
7. The mixed hand.

The important point of the elementary hand is the proportional length of palm and fingers. The longer the fingers, the better the hand. The larger the palm, the greater the physical or materialistic nature rules. The spatulate is the inventor's hand. The palm is broader at the base, and the fingers at the tips. Discoverers, engineers, the great army of the unsatisfied—the quivering horde—have this hand. The artistic is graceful in shape, delicate in contour, the fingers broad at the base and with tapering fingers. It denotes a nature impressionable, impetuous, generous and emotional. The square hand is just what it indicates—an orderly nature, a love of propriety and intensely conventional.

The philosophic hand is long and angular, with bony fingers, long nails and knotted knuckles. It is an ambitious hand, seeking power through knowledge. The psychic hand is most beautiful, but it indicates a nature too idealistic to be armed for the battles of life. It is long, narrow and delicate, tapering fingers and almond nails. There is neither logic nor order in the hand, but the religious and intuitive qualities are highly developed. The mixed hand is versatile and is very often erratic of purpose. Fingers that are flexible and supple indicate quick impressions and adaptability. When they are closed and the thumb set high on the hand, an absence of generosity and consideration of others is indicated. When the thumb is set apart, it indicates freedom of will and independence. If it turns slightly back, it indicates generosity. A sharp turn back denotes extravagance.

I cannot take space to tell you any more about hands, except again to warn you of their tremendous importance in the entire nature rules. The spatulate is

Polyp

Mrs. D. — Polyps are abnormal pear-shaped growths from the mucous membranes of the nose, bladder, rectum, etc. They are soft and jelly-like and have stems or pedicles. Most often they are due to some inflammatory condition and occur most commonly between the ages of 15 and 36. They should be removed for there is danger of their going on to malignant changes.

The growth-producing membrane cannot always be entirely removed, so occasionally a polyp will grow again after being cut out. A second operation has to be performed if the growth recurs.

Coated Tongue

Did you ever eat choke cherries? They are well named. Well I remember a picnic party we had in the Maine woods one day in my childhood. We came across one grove of choke cherry trees which were bearing such luscious burdens that we camped there and we ate to the bursting point. That night I woke up in distress, with my mouth so full of tongue, as a result of the choke cherry deposits, that I had to get up and scrape it before I could go to sleep again.

In normal health the mouth is continuously bathed by the alkaline saliva which has bactericidal properties; that is, it kills most bacteria. Those of us who keep our mouths open too much and more or less dry out the saliva, may be subject to coated tongue, even though we are not in ill health, for the tongue, forms an ideal incubation ground for yeasts, molds and other micro-organisms that abound in the air. This applies especially to those who sleep all night with their mouths open. (Any obstruction in the nose or throat which causes mouth breathing should be attended to for it will cause worse trouble than coated tongue.)

One of my professors used to say that a coated tongue is largely an indication that food wasn't masticated thoroughly. Most people notice that when they drink milk their tongues become coated. This is not to be considered a bad symptom at all, in this case.

In conditions of ill health from any cause, the tongue will become coated whether the mouth is open or not, because the saliva has more or less lost its germicidal power. However, not so much significance is placed on the condition of the tongue as a diagnostic symptom as formerly.

The tongue should be washed, as well as the teeth, twice a day, and if there is a coating, it should be gently moved with a tongue scraper. There are little bone scrapers, or you can use a piece of whalebone or a spoon—anything that isn't too sharp. Washing the mouth and tongue and teeth very thoroughly before retiring, and keeping the mouth shut during the night should prevent more than the normal coating in the morning.

A coated tongue naturally may give a bad taste, and if it is due to ill health, intestinal or otherwise, you must remedy this, before you can expect relief.

TEA

White Bread
English people drink tea with their breakfasts instead of coffee. We are a nation of coffee drinkers, it is said, but it might be well for us to substitute tea for our morning coffee once in awhile, especially in hot weather.

Today's Recipes.

Southern Chicken Dressing — One cup celery, one large onion, one bunch parsley, all coarsely chopped. Add these to the liquor while stewing a good fat hen. When chicken is tender strain the liquor and add the chopped celery, onion and parsley with about four cups of the liquor to a crumbled preparation of two cups white bread and two cups corn bread, made from cream (white) corn meal. Add also the giblets chopped, one egg (well mixed in), and salt and pepper to taste. This should make a very soft, mushy mixture. Just stuff into three or four loaves in diameter. Lay side by side in a dripping pan and bake while chicken is browning in oven. These may be served with the chicken or at a later meal.

Peach and Cream Cheese Salad — Halves of peaches (either fresh or canned), cream cheese, chopped nuts (walnuts), French dressing, lettuce. Fill peach halves with cream cheese spread over top, sprinkle with chopped nuts, lay on lettuce leaves, serve with French dressing.

Date-Nut Cookies — One egg white, one cup sugar, 1 cup walnuts or pecans, broken in pieces. Beat egg white stiff; add sugar, add white stuff slowly, drop in small mounds on buttered tin, bake in very slow oven until a pale brown, watching carefully lest they burn.

False Teeth

Mrs. J. — Yes, there is a substance used in the usual false teeth plates which will cause an irritation in the mouths of some. However, very few are sensitive to this. Those who are must have their plates made of gold or platinum, so my dentist tells me. Rather expensive, this sensitive person.

FEATURES

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Stewart lived in South America for several years.—Editor's Note.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Henry Ford is taking some risks which perhaps he has not fully considered, in assuming responsibility for the future of a territory—and its population—rather larger than Massachusetts. In the Brazilian jungle 500 miles back from the mouth of the Amazon.

Of the country's suitability for rubber production—the purpose for which Ford is acquiring it—of course there can be no question; the auto magnate's experts will have settled that question unmistakably.

It is unsafe to take it for granted that due allowance has been made for the almost insurmountable difficulties involved in gaining the mastery over an equatorial forest, and keeping it mastered. That Ford medics appreciate the dangers from tropical diseases and tropical insects and tropical snakes and tropical animals, as well as many forms of plant life, may be judged from the fact that a hospital ship is already on its way to the site chosen, on the bank of the Tapajoz river, for the port which is to serve as the rubber colony's base of operations.

All these are problems that can be foreseen in advance and probably conquered. There are others of a subtler nature, but just as serious.

To begin with, according to accounts from Para, capital of the state of the same name in which the Detroit multimillionaire's 6,000,000 acres are situated, Ford has been granted authority to rule the tract absolutely—not only to cultivate and develop it to the limit, but to economically entirely to subvert himself, but to govern it generally—his police it and run it politically.

Now, rubber culture in primitive countries has notoriously been attended in the past by frightful inhumanities to these countries' native inhabitants—and it has already been announced that Ford will depend on native labor, except as to bosses and technical experts. Of course there is no suspicion that Henry Ford would countenance the ill-treatment of natives in his new "sphere of influence," but it is a commonplace that big business' home-staying managements do not always know all that their subordinates are doing in distant parts of the world, where their power is unlimited.

At least, watchful eyes are sure to be kept on the prospective field of rubber exploitation, and there are bound to be Brazilian politicians who will not hesitate to make the most of any unpleasant rumors they may hear—possibly manufacture.

It is also unfortunately true that native labor in tropical lands is exasperating to foreign overseers almost to the point, as it doubtless frequently seems to the latter, of justifying reprisals.

The worker in such an environment is not under the necessity, as in our kindly climate of toiling to live. He can lie under a tree and catch his food in his lap as it falls from the branches. He needs no shelter and next to no clothes. Wages are of little importance to him. Unwilling to work at all, he quits at the drop of a hat.

But it simply never made money. It was always just about to do so—the expenditure of another million or so—but it never accomplished it.

The peculiar human equation is what seems to beat the North American on the southern continent. The European has the faculty of adapting himself to it—the Briton, the German, the Scandinavian, the Slav, the Turk and especially the Latin—but the Yankee almost never.

Now HE KNOWS
Elaine was very rich and William was poor. She liked him, but that was all, and he was well aware of the fact. One evening he was strangely silent and at last he said: "You're very wealthy aren't you, Elaine?"

"Well, William, I'm worth about four million."

"Will you marry me, Elaine?"

"Oh, William, I couldn't."

"I knew it."

"Then why did you ask me?"

"I just wanted to know how a man felt when he lost four millions."

of the hat. No agreement binds him. Labor, at best, is not very plentiful in Brazil and its independence is something beyond exaggeration.

Dispatches from Detroit indicate an impression that the Ford enterprise's high pay will convert the Brazilians to regular employment.

It is more than questionable. Aside from the fact that high pay is not much more of an inducement than low pay to a man who prefers not to work at any imaginable wage, the Ford scale is lower, in countries where the living standard is low, than in the United States. It is, to be sure, above the local rate, but the Ford management's policy, as explicitly expressed, is not to maintain American figures in parts of the world where they would be "ridiculous."

Brazil is a land of agitators. The difference between the earnings of a mechanic in a Detroit factory and a Ford plantation hand on the Amazon, assuredly will be brought to the plantation owner's attention, and if it does nothing else, it will make him jealous.

During a residence of six years in South America I had an opportunity to observe several North American business ventures into the tropics. The northern Argentine and the Bolivian lowlands, and not one of them ended in anything but disaster.

True, they were not of the same proportions as the Ford experiment, but one of them—in Paraguay—ran to an investment exceeding $20,000,000. Starting with cattle raising in the early days of the war, when meat was bringing unheard-of prices, it expanded until it covered hundreds of thousands of acres, until it had built two large packing plants, until it had engaged in a general importing and exporting business, until its offices and warehouses covered dozens of blocks in Asuncion, Concepcion, Puerto Pinarco and other shipwrecked river towns, until it carried several ocean-going ships, carrying its products—and in bankruptcy, paying a few cents on the dollar.

It had the reputation of being well-managed, too, with plenty of locally experienced experts among its advisors, and the best talent from the "states" in charge of its efficiency.

But it simply never made money. It was always just about to do so—the expenditure of another million or so—but it never accomplished it.

The peculiar human equation is what seems to beat the North American on the southern continent. The European has the faculty of adapting himself to it—the Briton, the German, the Scandinavian, the Slav, the Turk and especially the Latin—but the Yankee almost never.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

Ding! Ding! A Bell!

"Bob, oh, Bob," shrilled wife, "Listen! Don't you hear that bell? Surely we must be near the shore! In a little while the humans will be going into a white house where there is music. Don't you remember how last summer you used to fly from the clover field to perch upon the window sill and listen when the Two-Legs sang and one of them moved his fingers up and down and made beautiful noises, as it were, like the happy ringing of the bell in the old white church at home. Now it was low, now loud. Then for a little while we would not hear it. We thought we had left whatever it was behind us when suddenly it came mournfully booming again over the water."

"I heard the Two-Legs call it that—and the thing that the Human moved fingers over and made such sweet sounds was an organ—I knew that, too. For a moment I thought wife was right. And then I realized what time it was."

"But wife, the Two-Legs do not go to church before day-break," I said. "That which you hear can't be a church bell. Besides a church bell rings and then stops and this bell rings right on and on and on."

"So it did! Ding! Dong! Ding! Dong! Ding! Dong!" Such a gloomy sound as it was, too, out there in the darkness, not a hint of the happy ringing of the bell in the old white church at home. Now it was low, now loud. Then for a little while we would not hear it. We thought we had left whatever it was behind us when suddenly it came mournfully booming again over the water."

"When wife at last made up her mind that it was not a church bell as she had at first thought it must be, she became as gloomy as she had been glad."

"Oh dear, oh dear!" sighed she. "I do wish that horrid old ringing would stop. It makes me feel as if I had lost my last chance of seeing the dear old clover field again. Bob, do you suppose we are ever going to reach home? Perhaps we have lost our course."

"And we are lying right above the channel to the entrance of a harbor in our own home-land, or I very much so, my guess. See, wife, the dawn is coming. Wake up, in the East I see a faint light. Watch and you will notice it growing brighter. Before long the red ball will roll into sight. Courage, my sweetheart. Land is near!"

"Next—" "Light on the Water!" "Danger Ahead!"

OVERCOME HUDSON-ESSEX TO COLLECT SOFTBALL PENNANT

Long Winning Streak Puts Team Over In Circuit

The Carroll-Binder Co., softball team clinched the championship of the American League for the 1928 season by outclassing the Hudson-Exsex nine 12 to 3 Tuesday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

The victory brought the winning streak of the league champions to eight straight games, remarkable in the face of the fact this team was not rated as one of the contenders at the start of the season.

The Carroll-Binder Co. will meet the winner of the race in the National League in a post-season series, probably of three games, to decide the 1928 city softball championship.

Neville pitched Carroll-Binder Co. to the championship of its league. Assisted at all times by fast fielding, Neville held the enemy scoreless for four innings.

In the fifth he was nicked for two runs and a home run by Fred McCarran, but the bases empty in the eighth accounted for the third tally.

Carroll-Binder scored two or more runs in each of the first four rounds off "Stony" Fuller, Hudson-Exsex twirler, and won an easy victory.

The Harness Cigars, leaders in the National League, wind up their season against the Firemen Wednesday night in an important game. Harness can clinch the league title by a victory.

DURNBAUGH LEADING RACE FOR STICK HONORS AMONG RESERVES

Durnbaugh, who is showing the way in the race for individual batting honors this season on the Reserve baseball team, raised his average four points to a mark of .428 by singling twice in four times at bat last Sunday.

If reports are correct, the slugging Reserve center fielder will be given a try-out by the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League during the spring training season in 1929.

The team batting average remained stationary at .310 over Sunday.

PROFESSIONALS IN CHARGE OF OX-ROAST; BOOK CIRCUS ACTS

Electric light poles are being erected by The Dayton Power and Light Co., and booths are being installed at Cox Memorial Athletic Field in preparation for the ox roast and carnival, scheduled for Tuesday, August 28, beginning at 5:30 p. m., as a feature of the Home-Coming.

Six professional vaudeville acts have been engaged from the Gus Sun Amusement Co., of Springfield for the carnival, including first class entertainment. The acts will be staged on a large platform, in the process of erection in the center of the athletic field.

Ten oxen will be led to the slaughter for the ox-roast, it is disclosed. Captain Frank Feikley, Columbus, and a crew of eight men will be in charge of preparation of the meat. Captain Feikley is a professional in this line, having put on thousands of barbecues in all parts of the country.

He will bring along complete equipment, including steel pits and will start cooking the meat at 4 a. m. on the day of the ox-roast.

The services of more men and women will be required for the ox-roast and all persons willing to assist those in charge of the affair are asked to attend a meeting at Home-Coming headquarters at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night.

Becky Beall, the big, black mare, which has been raced with success since her purchase by J. C. Mitchell, Mechanicsburg, O., in 1925 during the Columbus, O. Grand Circuit meet, where she was given her record by the noted driver, Thomas W. Murphy, is made the subject of a long article by Edwin T. Keller, sport scribe.

Becky Beall showed rare form in the recent Greene County Fair meet, winning a stake race in an apparent easy manner and lowering the track record of the course to 2:06 1-2. The article follows:

Becky Beall was purchased in the fall of her three-year-old form from Trainer Tommy Murphy for the meager price of $1,800 by J. C. (Jim) Mitchell, of Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Last season Becky demonstrated on several occasions that she was a pacer of more than ordinary ability, but at that no one ever thought for a minute that some day she would be classed among the 2:00 possibilities, but that is just what she is today.

Her first race of the 1928 season, in the $25,000 Page Dairy 2:08 pace at Toledo, was something of a disappointment, but that can be taken off the books, as the mare apparently was not up to a grueling race that day. Just a week later she was a close second to the great horse Louise Direct (2:02 1-4), who was separately timed at the Toledo race in 1:58 3-4, at Kalamazoo. In her next start, at Mansfield, she simply ran off from a good field of pacers, winning with plenty in reserve. She was then taken to Xenia, Ohio, where she had another stake engagement, meeting there Patchen Boy (2:06 1-4) and Mose Direct (2:06 1-2), but there was nothing to it but Becky, she turning in her opening mile in 2:06 1-2 for a brand-new track record, not being extended until the final run through the stretch. From Xenia she was taken to Wilmington, where she again staked up against Patchen Boy, Mose Direct and several more, but again there was nothing to it but Becky, she romping off with the second heat in 2:05 1-4, lowering the track record a full second and a half, and had the track been in first-class condition that day many were of the opinion that the black mare would have paced the half-mile track there in 2:04.

The mare will be raced carefully from now until the fall meeting at Lexington, where her owner-trainer-driver, if conditions are favorable, will start her in an attempt to lower her record and place her name in the famous 2:00 group, and many of the critics are of the opinion that, if Becky retains her present form, she will turn the trick. Should she pace in two minutes, her dam, Rova McKinney (2:07 1-2), will be the first producer in the history of the harness horse sport credited with having three two-minute performers, and it will also place her sire, Peter Scott (2:05), second only to Guy Axworthy, 4 (2:08 3-4), as a sire of two-minute performers. Guy Axworthy having four to his credit.

The mare has stake engagements at Columbus, Indianapolis, Louisville and Lexington, after which she will be taken home by her owner-trainer, given a thorough rest this winter and then will be fitted for the big pacing stakes over eastern tracks during the 1929 season, with the Windsor Derby at Windsor, Conn., as her objective.

To date her owner has refused several flattering offers for his six-year-old, but has politely turned them aside, he having but one price on the mare, and if he can not realize that he will continue to pay all bills on her, and he should not worry if they do not purchase her, for with her demonstrated racing qualities and bred as she is, she will be worth a king's ransom as a brood mare, for she comes from one of the best line of families that the trotting sport boasts of, the Peter the Great and McKinney.

MAKE-UP A Romance of the Footlights

READ THIS FIRST:

Janet Mary James, eighteen, has an ambition to go on the stage, because her mother, who died the night she was born, had been a famous opera star. In New York Janet meets Ballard Riley, successful young physician, who is known as a woman hater. At first it was great fun for Janet to have dates with Ballard and tease him about his ideas. Later, Janet knows she loves Ballard, but he keeps her guessing. Mort Goldstein, producer of famous musical shows, sees that Janet has talent and plans to star her in a new musical show. Janet's father, a former mountain parson, reaches Broadway, too, and is holding a sensational revival up town. The newspapers learn of this, and give Janet a lot of publicity. Mort Goldstein hopes to sign up the parson for a big revival in Madison Square Garden while Janet is starring in the "Blue Laws of 1928". Goldstein's latest revue. In the show is Maxine Griffith, whom Janet helped in the rehearsal days, when the little chorus girl went broke. They became great friends. Janet's arch enemy is Florene Deslys, who is jealous of Janet's success, and snubs her on every occasion. Janet meets Della De Lacy, a show girl, at a night club. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXI

Janet looked up to see a young girl standing beside her, smiling. "Whose kid—yours?" "My goodness, no," she replied, savagely. "I would rather die before I'd bring a child into a place like this. He belongs to a man and woman out there. They ought to be shot!"

The girl looked at her curiously, and bent and felt the boy's head. "Poor little devil, he does look tired. You love kids, don't you?" Janet's eyes were tender.

"Who could help loving them? Poor little helpless darlings!" "I got a kid five months old myself," the girl confided, secretly.

Janet was dumbfounded. "Yeah," the girl smiled, "Della De Lacy is my stage name. But I'm Mrs. Dennis Reilly in real life. My husband deserted me, though, before my kid was born."

Janet's heart went out in sympathy. "Oh, honey, I'm so sorry. And you're all alone?" "Yeah, me and the little sweetie. He's cunning enough to eat, though, and I ain't kidding you."

"I'm sure he is," Janet was touched. "May I see him some time?"

The girl's face broke into a happy smile. "Oh, do you really want to? Gee, he's sweet."

She gave her address, and Janet promised faithfully that she would drop in some afternoon the next week.

The party had ended, so far as they all were concerned. It had sobered Maxine and the boys as much as it had Janet.

"Funny town when that kind of stuff can go on," Bob remarked, savagely, when Janet joined them at the table.

Maxine shook her head. "Poor little baby! Why don't God send them where they are wanted?"

Janet could not help noticing the look in Bob's eyes, as he held Maxine's hand. How she hoped they would wake up. What a poor husband Bob would make for little unhappy Maxine.

Janet was worn out. For weeks she had been playing in one show every night, and rehearsing in "Blue Laws of 1928" practically all day. A great deal of the joy of her coming success was taken away by Ballard's thoroughly disapproved of the type of show she was being starred in.

He tried to point out to her that it would only harm her reputation to capitalize on her father's publicity, but she was adamant. There was no way out. She had signed her contract and she was bitter enough to go through with it.

Meanwhile nothing was being left undone to advertise the coming revival capitalizing at the Garden, and nothing undone to get publicity for her. The tabloids ate the story up and cried for more. Janet was somewhat annoyed at times when they painted her a trifle too notoriously. But, Goldstein pointed out, it meant fame, and fame meant dollars.

Ballard Riley was thoroughly worried. He could not understand why he seemed to take Janet's career so to heart.

Why should he always leave Janet's studio with a feeling of regret that he was unable to analyze?

Although Janet tried very hard to hide her real feeling, her love for him was shown in every word she said. When she looked at him with that young face so full of worship and adoration, he wanted to turn away from it.

It worried him when he thought of breaking away from her entirely. It would have to be done. Things couldn't go on like that forever. Of course, he realized it would be difficult to break with her. Not only did he fear she would take it to heart—but she had grown very dear to him. That he did not deny to himself. After all, she was very desirable—and beautiful.

Ballard was a man of the world. He had seen the in the raw, and he had feelings, even from himself, under a coat of what he considers worldly understanding. He felt he knew life too well to be touched by it. That he had been a ringside seat observer—but that the show could never touch him.

He decided, because he was disturbed, that he was seeing Janet too much. And that he must break from her gradually. It would not be easy. But the step was a necessary one.

Janet grew a little hysterical at times when she thought of the future. She hung onto his every word for some little sign that his feeling for her was a lasting one—but so far there was nothing that she could base any future hope on.

He was devoted, the divine lover—but always he kept before her by some slight remark the thought that he could never mean any more to her than he did.

She closed her eyes at times, and felt ill all over. Never, never must she break down and let him know that he meant more to her than her life. She would be a good sport. She would not be a silly foolish girl. He told her she was a woman—the best sport she had ever seen, and she would live up to it. If it killed her—withered her soul, she would never, never betray her feelings again.

She would go on making him think she had forgotten all about the night he told her he loved her, and she loved him so.

He had only seen her once the week before the show opened. So it was that she went into the dressing room that night with a heart that ached until she felt it must break in two. Was he drifting away? Tired of her?

Florene Deslys's eyes narrowed as Janet came into the theater. That brat starring in a show that Goldstein had only given her a small bit in! It was the bitterest pill she had ever been called upon to swallow.

Janet tried to be happy. But she could summon little response to her effort to appear gay. She checked her desire to close the door and lock it and cry. She must be a trouper! Smile if it killed her, because the crowd would expect it of her. It was a sensational New York opening night—and she was the center.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—Perhaps she'll be the second exception to prove the rule that fame is no stepping stone to motion picture stardom.

Ruth Elder, working in the picture, "Moran of the Marines," has registered a decided hit with all hands at the Paramount studio.

She has won executives, directors and laymen to her. She films well and if only she clicks at the spread accounts of her attempted trans-Atlantic flight when she first came to Hollywood.

Now she likes the pictures and she desires to remain here.

Among the most notable flops of notables of other lines was Jack Dempsey. Even a remodeled nose didn't make him a motion picture hero.

As far as that goes, Gene Tunney, Babe Ruth and Charlie Faddock weren't bargains in the acting line.

Gertrude Ederle swam the English channel and then played a role in one picture.

George Young won William Wrigley Jr.'s, famous ocean marathon across Catalina channel but after a screen test Paramount advised him to stick to water.

Grange filmed well and critics generally agreed that he had a motion picture career at his calling. He took another course but contracts probably still remain open to him.

SUFFERER AT 65 FINDS RELIEF AT LAST IN KONJOLA

"Feel Better Than For Many Years", Says Xenia Man In Praising The Marvelous New Medicine.

Age and the duration of the ailment are no barriers to the health-restoring progress of Konjola, the new medicine the Konjola man is describing to scores of health-seekers every day at the Gallaher Drug Store, 33 East Main Street, this city. For young and old—for everyone—this modern remedy brings quick and lasting relief in troubles of the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels, and in stubborn cases of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Mr. W. R. Clark, South Miami Avenue, Xenia, is well and happy again after years of suffering from stomach trouble, and he looked years younger than his 65 years when he came to the Gallaher store to tell the Konjola Man his wonderful experience with this amazing compound. Mr. Clark said:

"I am 65 years old, but I feel many years younger since taking Konjola. It is hard to believe that any medicine could do what this wonderful compound accomplished in my case. Many years ago my stomach trouble developed, and became constantly worse, though I tried everything to help me. What I did manage to eat formed gas that caused bloating and almost unbearable pains. I belched up quantities of undigested food in a sour and burning liquid. Pains kept me from sound sleep. Naturally, with improper digestion, constant pains and loss of sleep I became weaker day by day, year after year.

"I realized that something had to be found that would give me permanent relief, but not until I tried Konjola did I find the right medicine. Konjola went right to the spot, as the Konjola Man said it would. I felt an improvement immediately, and as I proceeded with the treatment I could feel the indigestion leaving. My pains disappeared, appetite returned and with it strength and health. Now I sleep soundly and eat anything I like. And when I think of the years I suffered I keenly regret that I did not know of Konjola long ago. I will be glad to verify this statement personally to anyone who has suffered, without hope, as I did."

Konjola is a compound of 32 ingredients, each of time-tested medicinal value, and each has its duty to perform in cleansing, purifying, stimulating and restoring the affected organs. All work at once; that is why Konjola brings quick, lasting results. This new medicine contains no nerve deadening drugs, no hard depressant. It is not to give temporary, passing relief, but permanent results. To those who suffer Konjola offers abundant hope; what this master medicine has done for others it will do for you.

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, 33 East Main Street, Xenia, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.

WILSON'S WRATH

Talk Of Separate Peace Stirred President's Ire At Conference

WOODROW WILSON

(This is another of a series of stories about former presidents and their wives, termed "In Memory's Portrait Gallery" by the writer, Idaho McGlone Gibson, Mrs. Gibson personally interviewed the persons of whom she writes in such an entertaining manner.)

By IDAHO MCGLONE GIBSON
Especially Written for Central Press and Gazette

The day before the peace treaty was signed, President Wilson received the American credited correspondents in one of the parlors of the Hotel Crillon.

We were assembled when the president came in. He was looking pale and wan, but the familiar smile lighted his face as he leaned against the wall, facing about twenty-five reporters for the American newspapers. Only three of these were women.

The president remarked that he was at our mercy—with his back against the wall—and then the questions began.

That morning American cables had carried the news that Senator Albert B. Fall, of New Mexico (later in the oil lease scandals), had proposed that we scrap the peace treaty and enter into a separate peace with Germany, and one of the men (I think it was Wm.

G. Sheppard, press association correspondent) asked: "Mr. President, what do you think of the peace proposal?"

THE PRESIDENT IS TOLD

Turning quickly to the questioner, the president said he had not heard of it as he had not seen the papers that morning.

A dozen eager voices offered explanation.

It was then, for the first time, that I saw President Wilson angry. His hands, which were hanging loosely at his sides, were clinched so tightly that his knuckles showed a bluish-white. His face was suffused with a red that became almost purple before it died away into its accustomed pallor.

He forced himself to smile as he said, "I think I can best say what I think of it by telling you a story."

"When I was a boy, the town in which I lived had a way of disposing of its garbage by hauling it up a long, steep hill and burning it in a place outside the city limits."

WILSON'S OPINION OF HIM

"The man who drove the garbage wagon was the most profane man I ever have known. We boys used to follow him just to hear his pyrotechnic English as he urged his laboring horses up the hill where he rested the sweating animals a few minutes before they again resumed their way to the disposal site.

"One day we decided upon a brilliant idea. Watching our chance we lifted the loose wooden strip which acted as tailboard to the rickety wagon and then we crept behind him up the hill expecting to hear something more wonderfully profane than we ever had heard before."

"Slowly he ascended the hill without so much picturesque English as usual for as the horses hauled the wagon up the steep grade, a path of foul smelling garbage was left and the load grew lighter."

"Reaching the summit of the hill he got off his seat and looking back he saw that shining path strewn with garbage."

"For a moment he stood silent and then with a groan he said despairingly 'There ain't no words.'"

WOMAN HURT WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

Miss Rachel Dice, Elm St., is recovering from painful injuries to the left knee sustained when she was knocked down by an auto driven by William Ringer, son of John Ringer, Cincinnati Ave., at "Five Points" about 9:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

The driver stopped after the accident and took her home, where an examination has convinced Miss Dice she received a dislocation of the knee. A physician was not summoned.

Miss Dice was walking from W. Second St. to Cincinnati Ave. when she was struck by the auto, which was traveling north on Cincinnati Ave.

SENTENCED HERE FOR NON-SUPPORT

Harry M. Bennett, this city, was given a suspended sentence of ninety days in the County Jail and fined the costs by Acting Probate Judge R. L. Gowdy when he pleaded guilty to a non-support charge Tuesday afternoon.

"For no other cigarette, of the four leading brands in the blindfold test, could compare with Old Golds for pure pleasure to taste, tongue and throat."

LEGION SCORES HOME TRUSTEES

ASK RESIGNATIONS OF BOARD; CHARGE "UNABLE TO AGREE"

Would Have Donahey
Declare Positions
All Vacant

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 22.—Columbus resumed normal aspects today as the last of the Ohio American Legion convention delegates and visitors left the city last night and today after the closing session yesterday when officers were elected.

Raymond G. Ingersoll, Warren, was unanimously named commander. Other officers chosen were: Major Roy H. Jamieson, Cleveland, first vice commander representing the army; Sam M. Cobb, Columbus, second vice commander representing the navy; Frank Winters, Troy, third vice commander representing the marine corps; Porter Forsythe, Caldwell, treasurer.

Akron was chosen for the 1929 convention city. The convention committee recommended Sandusky but because of strong opposition to Sandusky by Cleveland, the rubber city was given the honor.

At the closing business session the legion went on record asking the resignation individually or collectively of the present board of trustees of Xenia Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, and called upon Gov. Donahey to "declare the trusteeships vacant and make immediate plans for the appointment of a new personnel on the board" in the event the resignations are not tendered.

The action followed a complaint of the legion that thirty-three recommendations looking toward the improvement of the Home made by both the legion and the Ohio department of public welfare in separate investigations were not acted upon by the board.

The resolution asserts that the trustees "seem unable to agree upon a policy of improvement while failing to adopt the recommendations made to it."

Included among the other resolutions passed for improvement of the home was one that involved the sending of children of high school age in the Home to the Xenia high school and not the high school in the home.

The legion also adopted a measure to seek a $10,000 appropriation for the next general assembly for the erection of a memorial to soldiers, sailors and marines of the World War, to be placed on the north buttress of the west steps of the statehouse; a measure seeking to obtain exemption from taxation for post owned property; and a request for a change in the present mothers' pension law that would make it effective in every county thereby relieve mothers of dependence on county commissioners.

Superintendent C. V. Burton returned to the Home Tuesday from Columbus, where he met with the child welfare committee of the legion, regarding the organization's proposed action regarding the institution.

He refused to discuss the situation which he described as "delicate." He declared the entire matter was embarrassing to him, since the legion is supporting his work, and that he is pledged to loyalty to the trustees, who govern the Home. He met with the child welfare committee before the regular business meeting, but would not disclose details of the interview.

MEMBER OF STATE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE DROWNS IN RIVER

DEFIANCE, O., Aug. 22.—Funeral arrangements were being completed here today for Newt Bronson, 52, member of the Democratic state central committee, who was drowned in the Auglaize River yesterday. The body was recovered last night by a woman diver, Mrs. R. R. Reeves, Red Cross beach supervisor.

Bronson's hat, coat and a number of papers were found on the bank near where his body was located. He had been in ill health several weeks.

For many years Bronson was active in politics. He was clerk of courts in Defiance County for three terms, Democratic nominee for congress, fifth district in 1920, delegate to the national Democratic convention at New York in 1924, and a candidate for secretary of state in 1926.

His brother, Edward S. Bronson, is mayor of Defiance. He leaves a widow and five children.

CHAUTAUQUA COMES TO CLOSE TUESDAY; MINSTREL FEATURES

Youngsters Win d-Up Junior Town With Health Show

The 1928 Redpath Chautauqua closed Tuesday night with a program by G. E. Solis and his Central American marimba band.

Six spirited Central American musicians composed this company. They featured every type of orchestral music, from the classics to modern popular airs. Recently they completed an important engagement at Miami, Fla.

Solis' marimba band also gave a concert on the afternoon program. Tuesday, the closing day, was celebrated as "Juniortown Day," when local boys and girls presented a popular health minstrel with costumes, jokes, songs and an interlude. This was the big feature of this year's Juniortown.

Preceding the minstrel, there was a parade through the tent. Honor badges were awarded for first, second and third prizes for the best floats, which included children's vehicles, such as toy wagons and other similar contrivances.

SHOW WAR RELICS IN COURT HOUSE

Three truck loads of World War relics, captured from the Germans, which have been loaned to the Greene County Home-Coming Association for display during the Home-Coming celebration here next week, will be on exhibit in the corridors of the Court House. Chairman T. H. Zell announced Wednesday.

County Commissioners granted permission for use of the Court House for the exhibition. The collection is the property of the Ohio National Guard, and is being furnished through the courtesy of Frank D. Henderson, Columbus, adjutant-general of the Guard.

ARBITRATION MEET MAY HALT PROPOSED RAILROAD STRIKE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22.—Another arbitration meeting, to be held in Chicago September 4, may forestall a threatened strike by 70,000 Western Railroad employees, A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, said today.

The last arbitration meeting came to an abrupt finish when a committee, representing the trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors left the meeting and ordered strike ballots prepared and circulated among the members of the two unions.

The unions had asked wage increase, ranging from 10 to 18 per cent, contending that present wage scales are below those paid yardmen, trainmen and conductors by railroads in the east and south.

The western roads offered a 7 1/2 per cent increase on condition that the unions consent to the abolishing of certain working rules.

At this point the union representatives left the meeting. A strike vote is now being taken. The ballots are to be counted September 2, and while the result will not be made public at that time, the unions are expected to make it one of their chief argumentative weapons in the September 4 conference.

J. W. Higgins, of Chicago, is to head a committee representing the railroads at the conference. Whitney said he would leave here for Chicago, September 1. He said he hoped an agreement could be reached settling the dispute, but that messages he has received concerning results of the votes in western cities indicate that the two unions are willing to enter into a joint strike if their representatives think such action is justified.

Occupants of a sedan, which left the highway and crashed into a pole after apparently failing to negotiate a sharp curve in the Dayton and Xenia Pike in front of the residence of Dr. George Anderson, five miles west of Xenia, Tuesday night, are believed to have been injured.

They were evidently residents of Dayton as the sedan bore license number 931,133, issued at Dayton, according to Deputy Sheriff George Sugden, who lives nearby and visited the accident scene Wednesday morning. The damaged car was abandoned. Blood stains indicated one or more persons had been hurt but there was no trace of the passengers.

BELIEVE AUTOISTS HURT IN ACCIDENT

Principal Woodruff announces that a few students failed to make out their study cards before school closed last spring. He requests these students to report to the principal's office and make out their cards before August 31.

School convenes at 8:30 a. m. September 4 and the full study schedule will be followed the opening day, it is announced.

On the same day seventy-eight years ago, three people were born in Xenia.

These people expect to hold a "reunion" at the Home-Coming next week. They are: Ben Snell, S. Detroit St.; Mrs. Emma Jones Robinson, W. Main St., and Charles Heaton, Cleveland. These three are to be honored by being given a place in a decorated auto in one of the parades and the auto will be marked so that all will recognize these veteran citizens of Xenia who are to meet here again.

Mrs. Emma Jones Robinson is the daughter of Isaac Robinson, who will be remembered by older citizens as having built the first "horseless carriage" seen on the streets of Xenia. He, in conjunction with the late Robert Richardson, owned and operated this machine which at that time attracted universal attention.

Mr. Heaton writes from Cleveland that he was summing at Mentor-on-the-Lake and on July 3 met with a severe accident, sustaining a dislocation of the spine. He was brought back to Cleveland and has been an invalid since his injury but is happy to state that he is now slowly recovering and hopes to be able to be here for the Home-Coming. He will not doubt be one of the speakers at the "Old Settlers" meeting when there will be a number who will recall their early experiences in Xenia.

Mrs. Charles Kelbie will look after the matter of giving this trio extra attention during the Home-Coming.

A REAL MIX-UP

Tom Mix (above), cowboy movie star, who is alleged to have knocked Middle Miller (below) down when she interfered in a vigorous quarrel between him and her husband, Will Morrissey, well-known actor. Morrissey is said to have insulted Mix's horse and to have been slapped as a result. After application of arnica, police arrested Morrissey and his wife on a charge of intoxication.

The sum of $100 has been set aside for a bronze tablet which will contain the names of those who have contributed $500 or more to the building, and will be placed in a prominent place on one of the pillars. This will not be ready for the Home-Coming, but a placard will be used instead so that these generous contributors will be given due credit during the Home-Coming season.

Visitors to the park are enthusiastic over the beauty of the building. In its setting of green it looks classic and with its red roof towering back of the trees, it will make a charming picture. At certain times its reflection is cast in the lagoon and one visitor remarked: "Lincoln Memorial in Washington has nothing on us."

SCHEDULES MAILED TO SCHOOL PUPILS

Schedules were mailed out Wednesday to 401 prospective students of Xenia Central High School for the 1928-29 school term, according to F. R. Woodruff, newly-appointed principal of the high school.

The schedules were mailed to 130 freshmen, 107 sophomores, eighty-nine juniors and seventy-five seniors. Schedules for 226 pupils in the seventh and eighth grades will be mailed out Thursday.

Principal Woodruff announces that a few students failed to make out their study cards before school closed last spring. He requests these students to report to the principal's office and make out their cards before August 31.

School convenes at 8:30 a. m. September 4 and the full study schedule will be followed the opening day, it is announced.

UNIQUE REUNION PLANNED

Three People Born Same Day 78 Years Ago Meet At Home-Coming.

On the same day seventy-eight years ago, three people were born in Xenia.

CEMENT FLOOR FOR PARK BUILDING IS FINISHED TUESDAY

Will Use Sunday; Will Dedicate Structure Later

The Shawnee Park Auditorium will be in readiness for the first occupancy next Sunday.

The last concrete for the floor was finished Tuesday night. Sheet piling is being rapidly put on for the roof and the work of putting on the asbestos shingles was started Wednesday morning. It has almost been a record breaker in the matter of quick construction, but it is a building that should last for a hundred years, being fire-proof and almost indestructible.

The scaffolding at the front and sides of the building will be taken down the latter part of this week and the place cleaned up and put in order for the Home-Coming. It is probable that the roof will not be quite completed as to the shingles but the sheeting will all be on and will provide ample shelter.

A thousand chairs will be obtained in Columbus and trucks will be sent after them and these will be placed in the auditorium so that there will be ample seating capacity. The Xenia Garden Club has arranged for the purchase of benches for the park to a seating capacity of one hundred persons.

The auditorium will not be dedicated during the Home-Coming, as it is still incomplete, and in all probability there will still be a debt hanging over it. It is therefore planned for the committee to hold this dedicatory service a little later, when the building is entirely complete and sufficient money has been obtained to lift the debt.

There is still a deficit of about $2,000 and it is hoped that all pledges will be paid promptly and that persons who have not yet contributed will come to headquarters and make a donation. It has been almost impossible to see everybody personally and the Home-Coming committee trusts that any who have been overlooked will come forth with subscriptions.

The sum of $100 has been set aside for a bronze tablet which will contain the names of those who have contributed $500 or more to the building, and will be placed in a prominent place on one of the pillars. This will not be ready for the Home-Coming, but a placard will be used instead so that these generous contributors will be given due credit during the Home-Coming season.

Visitors to the park are enthusiastic over the beauty of the building. In its setting of green it looks classic and with its red roof towering back of the trees, it will make a charming picture. At certain times its reflection is cast in the lagoon and one visitor remarked: "Lincoln Memorial in Washington has nothing on us."

Green's skull was crushed while Smith escaped with minor injuries.

FAMILY AWAITS NEWS OF FLYER

While Bert Hassell, Rockford-to-Stockholm airman, was lost somewhere between Cochrane, Ont., and Greenland, his wife and three children sat at the radio, waiting eagerly for some word of the flight's progress. Left to right are Victor, 3; John, 5; Rosalie, 16 months, and Mrs. Hassell.

HOOVER DEDICATES SERVICES TO IMPROVEMENT OF U. S. HOMES

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Aug. 22.—Assuming the role of a crusader for the development of American family life, Herbert Hoover today dedicated his services as president, if elected, to the improvement of American homes.

The Republican nominee took this pledge at his birthplace in West Branch, Iowa. The subject seemed so close to his heart that he diverted from his first farm speech to discuss it.

"The solution of these problems (confronting our country) has but one purpose," he said. "That is, the comfort and welfare of the American family and the American home. The family is the unit of American life, and the home is the sanctuary of moral inspiration and of the American spirit. The true conception of America is not a country of 110,000,000 people, but a nation of 23,000,000 families living in 23,000,000 homes. I pledge my service to these homes."

In his visit to Iowa and especially, at his birthplace, Hoover revealed an emotional side almost unknown to the public. In talks of his early days here, and his departure for the west as a penniless orphan tears came to the nominee's eyes. To his friends,

MACRACKEN WILL SPEAK WEDNESDAY

William Macracken, assistant secretary of commerce in charge of aviation, will deliver the principal address at the grand final assembly on "Patriotic Day," Wednesday night, August 29, the closing day of the Greene County Home-Coming. It is announced by E. Trubee Davidson, assistant secretary of war, had originally been invited to make the main speech, but Home-Coming officials learned that he will be unable to fill the engagement.

Gen. Benson W. Hough, Columbus, will preside as chairman at the closing exercises, which will begin at 7 o'clock.

BIG FOUR CURTAILS TRAIN SERVICE

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 22.—The Big Four railroad will discontinue train service between Delaware and Springfield on the Delaware branch of the road after September 2nd, the state utilities commission announced here today.

A mixed train service, between Delaware and Springfield, on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays and in reverse direction on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays will be substituted. This service will consist of a local freight train with a railway coach attached.

USING HIGH SCHOOL
A banner suspended in front of the Central High School Bldg., Tuesday evening, informed Home-comers that the historical exhibit in charge of Dr. W. A. Galloway, chairman of the historical committee, will be held there. Original plans to hold the exhibit in the Masonic Temple auditorium were changed. The high school is expected to furnish ample accommodations for the exhibit.

he praised the opportunities of the mid-west in no uncertain terms.

In his farm speech, Hoover created a small sensation by tendering the olive branch to former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, who denounced the Republican farm plank after the Kansas City convention rejected the equalization fee. Hoover publicly asked Lowden to participate in the farm conference he will call, if elected, to find a solution for agricultural depression. After saying he recognized the value of the farm aid efforts of various leaders, Hoover added:

"Outstanding farmers, such as Governor Lowden, will be asked to join in the search for common ground upon which we can act. Hoover devoted most of his speech to stressing the necessity for inland waterway development. He declared waterways would reduce transportation costs on farm products while building up the mid-west to such a degree that industry generally and the railroads, too, would benefit. Under present conditions, he said, "a row of toll racks" have been placed around the mid-west. Construction of the St. Lawrence waterway and waterways from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, he said, would bring a "seven to ten per cent saving per bushel." Such a saving, he declared would "force upward the price of the whole crop."

Hoover urged the farmers to adopt "modern business methods" in marketing their crops. This was predicted by International News Service and the nominee will devote a speech in the future to this subject alone.

The nominee faced a busy program for the next two days. He left West Branch early this morning, motoring here by way of Iowa City. The citizenry of the latter city appeared to have turned out en masse to cheer Hoover as he rode through the gaily decorated streets.

Hoover's first action here, after a parade through the streets, was to review a parade of boys and girls at Brucemore, an estate near the city. The remainder of the day was to be devoted to farm conferences.

When the governor is received at the platform by Chairman Raskob there is to be a pause for the rendition of the combined musical forces of the Sidewalks of New York. Chairman Raskob, who is to preside, will then present the Rev. John N. Roney, canon of All Saints' Protestant Episcopal Church, who will pronounce the invocation.

Mayor John Boyd Thacher will next welcome the multitudes.

United States Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the notification committee, appointed by the Houston convention, will then deliver his brief address formally apprising Governor Smith of his selection as party standard bearer. At 7:30 p. m., Eastern Daylight Time, Governor Smith is to begin his speech of acceptance, over a nation-wide radio hookup of more than 100 stations, expected to require about an hour and a half.

The benediction will be invoked by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Joseph A. Delaney, vicar-general of the Catholic diocese of Albany.

PARTY PATRIARCHS GATHER IN ALBANY TO HONOR NOMINEE

Hotels Filled For Ceremony; Starts 7 p. m.
Xenia Time

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The legions of Democracy assembled here today in gala spirit from the four corners of the land to confer the laurels of party leadership upon "the happy warrior" brow of Governor Alfred E. Smith.

By twos and by sixes they came in automobiles, by dozens and by scores in a seemingly endless line of motor buses, by hundreds and by thousands in special cars and special trains over every rail artery to the capitol of the Empire state.

Party patriarchs came in high hats and frock coats to honor a new leader. Democrats from the precincts of every state came in holiday spirit and workday apparel to voice their enthusiasm for the triumph of the man who rose to national leadership from the selling stalls of Fulton fish market. Voters and citizens came by thousands to see a colorful spectacle and to cheer the man they know as "Al."

The formal ceremonies of notification were scheduled for the historic steps of the state capitol at 6 o'clock, Eastern Daylight Saving time, but the early dawn found the carnival spirit already in possession of Albany's streets. A mile from the capitol, street hawkers, with banners, badges and buttons, were busy at daylight peddling their gala-day wares to an unbroken line of motor cars groping their way through a snail-paced traffic.

Hotels had long since given up the struggle and army cots were pressed into service at midnight to solve the housing problem of the visitors.

Restaurants, by keeping chefs over their broths and puddings to eighteen hours, managed to accommodate everyone in the end, but the finer distinctions between breakfast and luncheon were unrecognizably shaken early in the day in the name of Democracy's big whoopee.

There were official police estimates that the visiting throngs numbered about 100,000, but that obviously could not have included the marching bands of Hawaiian string quartets whose members kept the bunting fluttering on State Street from 7 o'clock onward with the high melody of "The Sidewalks of New York," rendered with slightly hoarse voices.

It was an "Al Smith break" on the weather according to the early moving prognostications of Gustav Lindenberg, vice and republican forecast for the Albany weather bureau. A storm area, which gathered in the vicinity yesterday afternoon moved eastward so briskly during the night that the regular morning bulletin was reset from "cloudy, with probable showers" to "fair in the afternoon and evening, with moderate southerly winds."

The program arranged for the capital steps will require about three hours. Bands will begin playing for the assembling throngs at 6 o'clock daylight time, and half an hour later, the Sigma Gamma Club of Newark, N. J., will sing a series of songs associated with the history of the party and candidate.

At 7 o'clock, Governor Smith is scheduled to walk down the broad granite steps to the speakers' platform, to the bugle salute of "assembly" and the band's strident "Hail To The Chief."

When the governor is received at the platform by Chairman Raskob there is to be a pause for the rendition of the combined musical forces of the Sidewalks of New York. Chairman Raskob, who is to preside, will then present the Rev. John N. Roney, canon of All Saints' Protestant Episcopal Church, who will pronounce the invocation.

Mayor John Boyd Thacher will next welcome the multitudes.

HOME TO WELCOME
HOME-COMERS HERE

Anyone attending the Greene County Home-Coming will be welcomed at the O. S. and S. O. Home, Superintendent C. V. Burton announced Wednesday.

The Home will be open to visitors during the coming week, and returning Greene Countians will receive the hospitality of the Home officials.

WELCOME, HOME - COMERS

In another week, Xenia will be flooded with former residents, returning to their old home in response to invitations to attend the Greene County Home-Coming.

They will come into Xenia by train and auto, agape at the changes time has wrought here.

They will find that they can travel to almost any section of the city on well-paved streets, or walk anywhere they want to go without getting off a cement sidewalk.

They will learn that both sanitary and storm sewer service has been extended to all of these outlying regions, that water plugs are available for fire protection, that electric street lights stretching to the corporation limits replace the gas lamps and arc-lights of several years ago, that Xenia's water system is of the finest and is municipally owned.

They will discover that these streets are daily cleaned and washed, that pride has been taken in re-building or re-modeling Xenia's downtown business buildings, that Xenia's stores are handsomely housed, up-to-date in merchandise in both quality and quantity.

They will wander delighted through Xenia's new Shawnee Park, inspect the new auditorium, view the new Central High and East High buildings, inspect the new Masonic Temple, see the Cox Memorial Athletic Field that has replaced the rented fields of years ago.

They will stand amazed at the pride Xenia householders have been taking in beautifying their properties, in the care and time and effort that has been put into beautiful lawns and flower gardens.

These folks are home-comers—former Xenians, but they will revel in the atmosphere of a new Xenia alive to the march of progress, keen to take advantage of the new and the ultra in the matters of municipal excellence.

Hundreds of questions will leap to their lips—questions of "how" and questions of "why".

Xenians, answering "why," will tell them that here is an indication of the new order of things—the evidence of a new spirit of civic pride, of municipal patriotism, of community co-operation.

Answering "how", they will point to sacrifice. Everything that has been done represents money, time and effort spent. The matter of money is a matter of taxes and tax returns are based on property investment. This fact makes corporations, manufacturers, merchants, heaviest contributors to the budget of public moneys.

Merchants, constantly improving and enlarging their businesses, increase their tax liabilities. By this means they are paying for the paved streets and sidewalks you use, for the service advantages which help make you comfortable, for the fire and police protection you are accorded, for the education given your children.

The average tax-payer, paying on a $5,000 property valuation, must pay approximately $150 a year in taxes. That is probably one-tenth of the salary of the teacher who is helping give his child an education; it is approximately one one-hundredth of the expense involved in insuring that citizen police and fire protection; it is only a fraction of the great expense involved in providing for each citizen the comforts, advantages and municipal services of urban existence.

Who makes up the difference? The answer, of course, is the large tax-payer—the man whose investment here makes his tax liability large enough to make up for the small tax-payer or the non-tax-payer.

And not the least of these are the merchants, who are constantly increasing their tax liability by constantly providing bigger and better stores in which you enjoy the advantages of quality merchandise at prices which high rents and overhead prevent the big city merchant from matching.

And not the least of the non-tax-payers are those merchants in other cities who attempt to lure Xenia's dollar away from Xenia's merchants to the end that Xenia's streets, sewers, parks, police and fire protection and school system, will suffer.

Let pride in Xenia reflect in the spirit in which Xenians greet home-comers next week.

LET THE GOLDEN RULE PREVAIL.

"KIND ARE HER ANSWERS"

KIND are her answers.
But her performance
keeps no day;
Breaks time, as dancers
From their own music when
they stray.
All her free favors
And smooth words wing my
hopes in vain.
O, did ever voice so sweet but only feign?
Can true love yield such delay,
Converting joy to pain?

Lost is our freedom
When we submit to women so;
Why do we need 'em
When, in their best, they work
our woe?
There is no wisdom
Can alter ends by fate pre-
fixed.
O, why is the good of man with evil mixed?
Never were days yet called too
But one night went betwixt.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE PURE WORD—Every word of God is pure: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him.—Prov. 30:5.

POPULAR PASTIME

Turning on Thompson has become the most popular of Chicago's pastimes. Erstwhile supporters of and shouters for "Big Bill," who enjoyed his favor and were proud to be known as members of his organization, are running away from him like ants from a kerosene drenched hill.

Those who condoned Thompson's misgovernment of Chicago are now saying it was a mistake to entrust him with the grave responsibilities of office. Men who grinned at his baiting of Superintendent Andrew, dolefully deplore the blight which Thompson put on the schools. There is indignation where there was indulgence for Thompson's clowning of the part he was cast to play. There is mock horror over the disclosures of incompetency, extravagance and waste for which Thompson must answer.

If there be any real sympathy for Thompson it comes from those who have consistently opposed him in politics. Persons who have felt all along that Thompson's finish would be in humiliation, and who have done what they could to prevent his elevation to the height from which he has fallen, doubtless feel sorry for him. Their compassion he may spurn, but he ought to get a measure of satisfaction out of their contempt for his disloyal double-crossing followers.

FRENCH WOMEN'S WAR

The war widows of France and the spinsters of the nation have taken up arms against each other and the government is seeking a Solomon. The casus belli is the government pension granted the widows so long as they do not remarry. The widows are protesting discontinuance of the pension upon remarriage on the grounds that the government is under obligation to them for the loss of their first husbands and that, by remarrying, they are offering to aid France's declining birth rate.

But the unmarried women of the nation have advanced an argument that the government is finding hard to answer. They assert they are just as able as the widows to aid the birth rate as just as willing, if they can find husbands. Pensioning the remarried widows would be, in effect, a subsidy for them which would further enhance their attractiveness and make them formidable rivals in the matrimonial market, it is argued.

The widows have effected a strong organization while the maids have contented themselves with random, albeit disconcerting shots at the government. Officialdom, made up of men naturally gallant (a racial trait) may be pardoned if it appears disconcerted and somewhat ruffled. There seems little that can be done about it except to make a decision one way or the other and then keep out of sight until the storm subsides.

GETTING "BACK TO NATURE"

Most normal people have periods when they want to camp out. The life of settled homes seems tiresome to them. Nothing makes a boy happier than to give him a tent. If he can't camp in some good swimming and fishing place, he will put it out in the back yard, and be infinitely happier sleeping on a hard bed than he is on his springs in the home.

Our homes of today, which would have seemed so luxurious to our grandparents, make us too soft. People's experience is not complete unless they have tried camping out in some plain resort where they have to do their own work and live in a somewhat primitive way. The open air and vigorous work make it an invigorating experience.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE BIG PENNY

Most of us find it hard to be convinced that a penny has any value. It seems too small to be reckoned with. Buy a cigar and the clerk will either give you a little pack of matches or sell you quite a box of them for a cent. Who could make any money out of pennies? The facts about a penny business may give us something to think about. The gross business of the 18 match manufacturing concerns in this country in one year was nearly $25,000,000. These plants paid out more than $4,000,000 in wages. Don't fail to respect the power of the penny.

THE COST OF SICKNESS

What is it costing you a year to be ill? A report to the International Conference of Social Work estimates illness in the United States costs each family $134.68 a year. Cost per person is estimated at $31.08. It would be interesting to know how much our bills for sickness might be cut down by a little more common sense and will power in the matter of eating and sleeping.

TOLERANCE OF DRESS

The lack of tolerance for individuality is a pretty sad thing. We read that one of the principal cities of Bolivia passed a law that the native Indian inhabitants of the city must abandon their bright colored skirts, odd hats, and other quaint apparel which they have been wearing for hundreds of years, and must adopt the European fashion of dress, like the rest of us. That's too bad. Little by little all the folks of the earth are being standardized. In time they will be alike, from rubber boots to religion. This is the ideal of the professional "hundred per center." It's a narrow attitude which cares little for beauty, for freedom, and for self-expression.

CONTACT

Call on as many people as you can. Talk to them face to face. Do all the business you can by personal contact. This ought to be advice for salesmen. Letters and telephone talks lose much business. If you don't believe in the power of contact, think what the traveling of the Prince of Wales has meant in good will to the British empire.

The Diary
of a
New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK. — The airplane is having a notable effect on New York skyscraper architecture. Designers of big buildings mindful that from now on such structures will be viewed from new angles by air travelers, are taking another dimension into consideration in drawing plans.

More attention is being paid to color. This note isn't new, for the American Radiator building with its impressive black and gold stripings, gave other architects ideas; but the terra cotta people are working overtime now, meeting the demands for bright colors for skyscrapers.

Half a dozen tall structures in the metropolis have aerial beacons, and the possibility of future use of roofs for landing is being considered by the architects in the designs for all towers of commerce.

Most of New York's busiest corners, which without a doubt are the busiest in the world, are not in the so-called downtown district, but in outlying sections. For instance, Broadway and Ninety-sixth street.

More than 4,000 vehicles pass there between 5 and 6 p. m. on an average.

A large subway station is located there, and it is a stop on a municipal bus route, so that probably a total of 100,000 to 150,000 persons mingle in the traffic at that point in the hour.

Gene Tunney's much publicized knowledge of Shakespearean drama isn't the "bunk," as many suspect. A friend of mine was present at a luncheon given for the champion a few days after his retirement from the ring was announced, and on being presented to the fighter, recited a Shakespearean quotation he considered appropriate to the occasion. Incidentally, the lines were about the only ones by the Bard of Avon my friend knew.

Tunney smiled, said, "That's from 'The Tempest,'" and continued the quotation for 10 or 15 additional lines.

John D. Rockefeller, sr., is one of the pillars of the Baptist church, but one of his closest friends is the Rev. Father Patrick J. Lennon, rector of St. Cecilia's Roman Catholic church, in 105th street. He is often a Rockefeller house guest. Well, Father Lennon has never asked a contribution from Mr. Rockefeller, who is the largest contributor to church funds and philanthropic organizations in the world; and he doesn't want one. "I don't believe in a church looking to a rich man to bear its expenses. I've seen a good many of these churches built by rich men, memorial churches for instance. The people don't care for them. They don't feel that the church belongs to them. I don't mean that the rich man shouldn't give something, but only his part."

Father Lennon says he and Mr. Rockefeller never discuss religion.

Of all the heartless rackets practiced in New York on the runways, the most brutal, it seems to me, is one aimed at jobless persons. Agencies or concerns insert fake help wanted advertisements in newspapers, to attract unemployed men and women to an office where they are asked to put up bond money, or make a deposit on a uniform or to buy goods which are to be resold "at a profit." In most cases the applicant is deceived and victimized.

Newspapers make every effort to eliminate such advertising, but find it difficult to prevent it. Widows forced to seek work in middle age are particular prey of the racketeers, who frequently obtain the insurance next egg of a newly bereaved wife who believes she is securing herself against want by becoming a "specialty saleswoman" or an investor in a "tea room."

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

The most exciting book I have read in several months is called "Political Myths and Economic Realities." I found it exciting because, like an adventure story, it contained elements of surprise. In every chapter I was surprised to find how many of my beliefs did not tally with what appeared to be facts.

I had so many notions upset that reading the book was like riding one of those trick vehicles at Coney Island.

I wonder why it is that we usually hunt up acquaintances who think on most subjects exactly as we do, and read mainly authors who agree with us? Why do conservatives read conservative papers and radicals radical papers? Why wouldn't it be more fun to get the thrill of bumping into the unexpected?

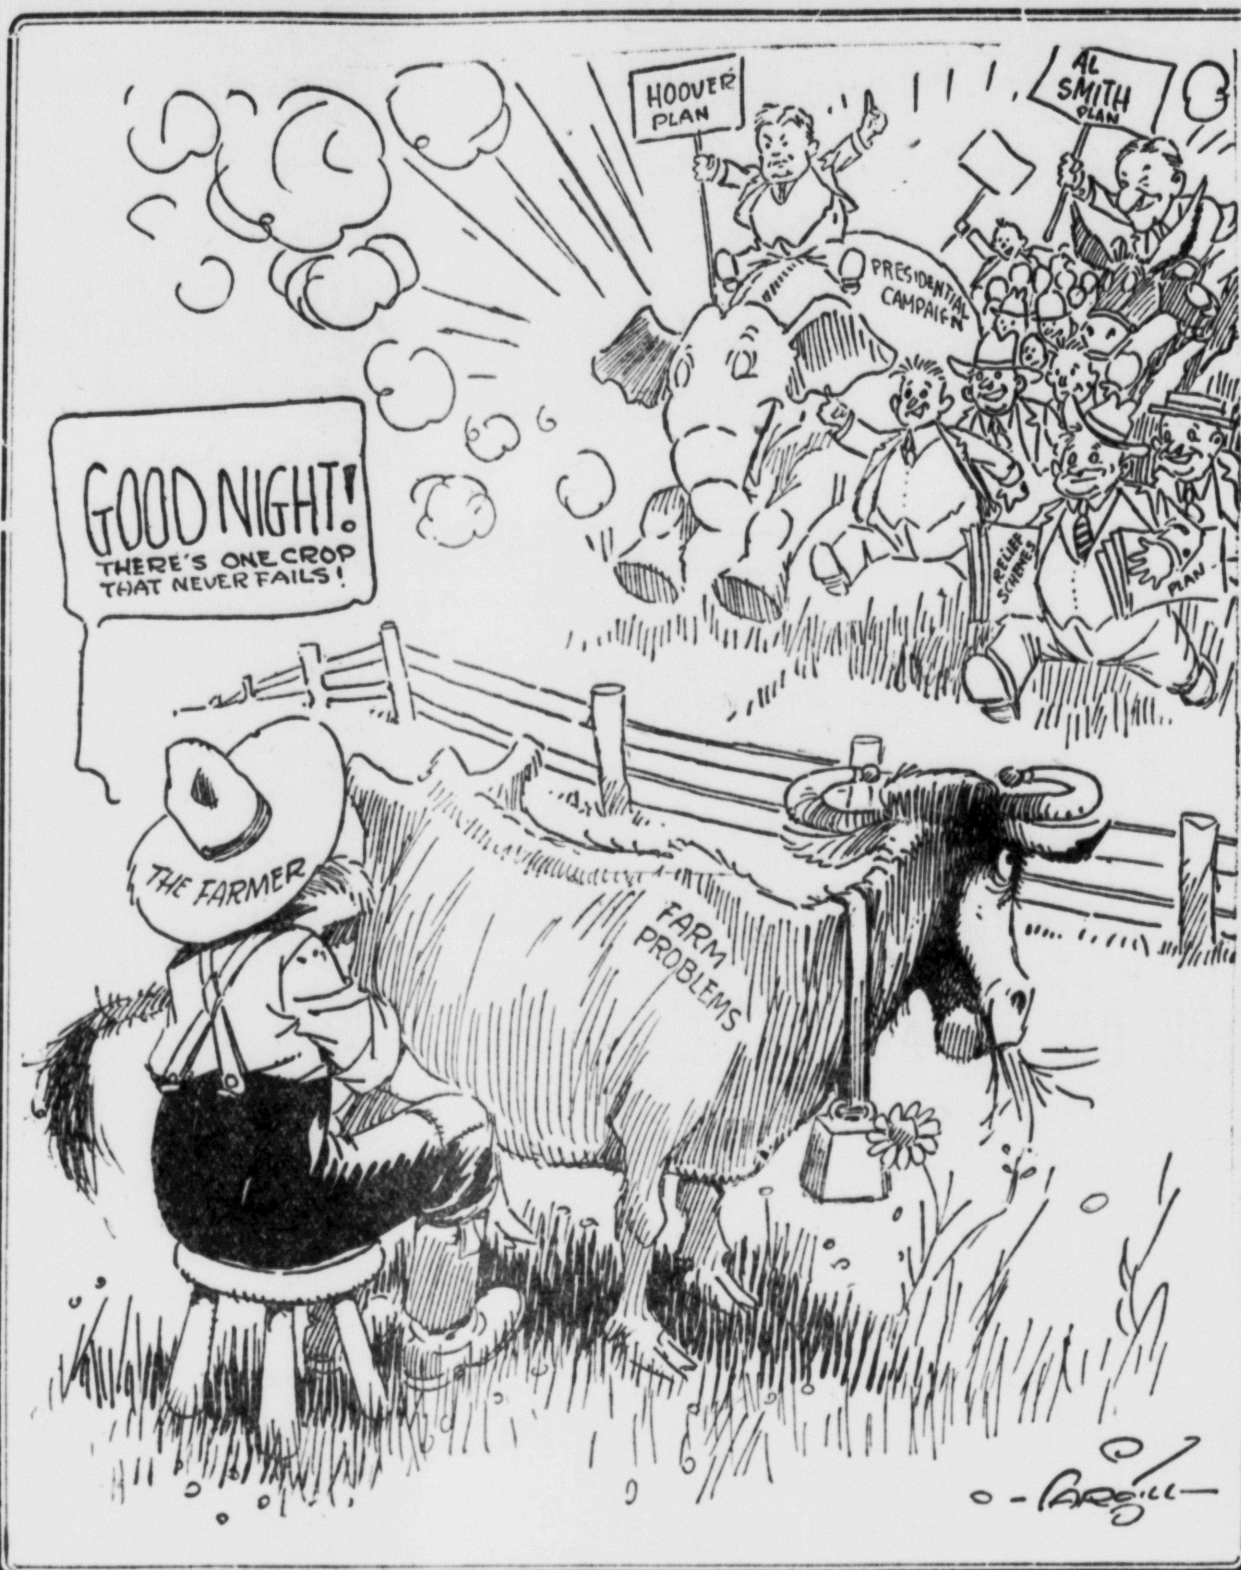

POPULAR KELLY

Fred C. Kelly, who writes the daily Kellygrams feature for Central Press, is in greater demand than ever as a national writer. Snatching off time between Kellygrams and a new book going to press, he has written articles for The Nation's Business and Cosmopolitan. Readers everywhere know Kelly.

There are a good many people who can perfectly well be trusted, if they pay for their goods in advance.

Formerly people used to ask locks of hair from their friends, but now they demand the scalps of the politicians.

How to Achieve Beauty

The Language of Your Hands

It is strange how our hands betray the very essence of our beings. Not only through the thousand different attitudes, gestures and finger positions, but in other languages so deeply interwoven that the study of them has become a science.

Whatever the differences of opinion in respect to palmistry, and those differences have been wide, indeed, there is no doubt in the mind of one who has even dabbled in the art that there are certain peculiarities in the markings of each hand which indicate certain traits of character. I never knew a woman who was not interested in the subject of palmistry, and because of this, even though I am no palmist and am depressing somewhat, I am going to tell you today just a little about its principles.

Its origin antedates the earliest human records. According to its teachings, there are seven types of hands:

1. The elementary—large palm.
2. The spatulate—long fingered.
3. The artistic, or conical hand.
4. The useful, or square hand.
5. The psychic, or pointed hand.
6. The philosophic, or knotted hand.
7. The mixed hand.

The important point of the elementary hand is the proportional length of palm and fingers. The longer the fingers, the better the hand. The larger the palm, the greater the physical or materialistic nature rules. The spatulate is the inventor's hand. The palm is broader at the base, and the fingers at the tips. Discoverers, engineers, the great army of the unsatisfied—the questing horde—have this hand. The artistic is graceful in shape, delicate in contour, the fingers broad at the base and with tapering fingers. It denotes a nature impressionable, impetuous, generous and emotional.

The philosophic hand is long and angular, with bony fingers, long nails and knotted knuckles. It is an ambitious hand, seeking power through knowledge. The psychic hand is most beautiful, but it indicates a nature too idealistic to be armed for the battles of life. It is long, narrow and delicate, tapering fingers and almond nails. There is neither logic nor order in the hand, but the religious and intuitive qualities are highly developed. The mixed hand is versatile and is very often erratic of purpose. Fingers that are flexible and supple indicate quick impressions and adaptability. When they are closed and the thumb set high on the hand, an absence of generosity and consideration of others is indicated. When the thumb is set apart, it indicates freedom of will and independence. If it turns slightly back, it indicates generosity. A sharp turn back denotes extravagance.

I cannot take space to tell you any more about hands, except again to warn you of their tremendous importance in the ensemble of a beautiful woman.

Polypi

Mrs. D. — Polypi are abnormal pear-shaped growths from the mucous membranes of the nose, bladder, rectum, etc. They are soft and jelly-like and have stems or pedicles. Most often polypi are due to some inflammatory condition and occur most commonly between the ages of 15 and 36. They should be removed for there is danger of their going on to malignant changes.

The growth-producing membrane cannot always be entirely removed, so occasionally a polypius will grow again after being cut out. A second operation has to be performed if the growths recur.

Coated Tongue

Did you ever eat choke cherries? They are well named. Well I remember a picnic party we had in the Maine woods one day in my childhood. We came across one grove of choke cherry trees which were bearing such luscious burdens that we camped there and we ate to the bursting point. That night I woke up in distress, with my mouth so full of tongue, as a result of the choke cherry deposits, that I had to get up and scrape it before I could go to sleep again.

In normal health the mouth is continuously bathed by the alkaline saliva which has bactericidal properties; that is, it kills most bacteria. Those of us who keep our mouths open too much and more or less dry out the saliva, may be subject to coated tongue, even though we are not in ill health, for the tongue, forms an ideal incubation ground for yeasts, molds and other microscopic organisms that abound in the air. This applies especially to those who sleep all night with their mouths open. (Any obstruction in the nose or throat which causes mouth breathing should be attended to for it will cause worse trouble than coated tongue).

One of my professors used to say that a coated tongue is largely an indication that food wasn't masticated thoroughly. Most people notice that when they drink milk their tongues become coated. This is not to be considered a bad symptom at all, in this case.

In conditions of ill health from any cause, the tongue will become coated whether the mouth is open or not, because the saliva has more or less lost its germicidal power. However, not so much significance is placed on the condition of the tongue as a diagnostic symptom as formerly.

The tongue should be washed, as well as the teeth, twice a day, and if there is a coating, it should be gently removed with a tongue scraper. There are little bone scrapers that you can get at the drugstore, or you can use a piece of whalebone or a spoon—anything that isn't too sharp. Washing the mouth and tongue and teeth very thoroughly before retiring, and keeping the mouth shut during the night should prevent more than the normal coating in the morning.

A coated tongue naturally may give a bad breath, and if it is due to ill health, intestinal or otherwise, you must remedy this, before you can expect relief.

White Bread
English people drink tea with their breakfasts instead of coffee. We are a nation of coffee drinkers, it is said, but it might be well for us to substitute tea for our morning coffee once in awhile, especially in hot weather.

Today's Recipes.

Southern Chicken Dressing — One cup celery, one large onion, one bunch parsley, all coarsely chopped. Add these to the liquor while stewing a good fat hen. When chicken is tender strain the liquor and add the chopped celery, onion and parsley with about four cups of the liquor to a crumbled preparation of two cups white bread and two cups corn bread, made from cream (white) corn meal. Add also the giblets chopped, one egg (well mixed), and salt and pepper to taste. This should make a very soft, mushy mixture. Just stiff enough to be formed into flat cakes about three inches in diameter. Lay side by side in a dripping pan and bake while chicken is broiling in oven. These may be served with the chicken or at a later meal.

Peach and Cream Cheese Salad — Halves of peaches (either fresh or canned), cream cheese, chopped nuts (walnuts). French dressing, lettuce. Fill peach halves with cream cheese spread over top, sprinkle with chopped nuts, lay on lettuce leaves, serve with French dressing.

Date-Nut Cookies — One egg white, one cup sugar, 1 cup walnuts or pecans, broken in pieces. Beat egg white stiff; beat in sugar, add dates and nuts slowly, drop in small mounds on buttered tin, bake in very slow oven until a pale brown, watching carefully lest they burn.

False Teeth

Mrs. J. — Yes, there is a substance used in the usual false teeth plates which will cause an irritation in the mouths of some. However, very few are sensitive to this. Those who are must have their plates made of gold or platinum, so my dentist tells me. Rather expensive, this sensitiveness.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

'Stewart lived in South America for several years.—Editor's Note.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Henry Ford is taking some risks which perhaps he has not fully considered, in assuming responsibility for the future of a territory—and its population—rather than Massachusetts, in the Brazilian jungle 500 miles back from the mouth of the Amazon.

Of the country's suitability for rubber production—the purpose for which Ford is acquiring it—of course there can be no question; the auto magnate's experts will have settled that question unmistakably.

It is safe to take it for granted that due allowance has been made for the almost insurmountable difficulties involved in gaining the mastery over an equatorial forest, and keeping it mastered. That Ford medics appreciate the dangers from tropical diseases and tropical insects and tropical snakes and tropical animals, as well as many forms of plant life, may be judged from the fact that a hospital ship is already on its way to the site chosen, on the bank of the Tapajoz river, for the port which is to serve as the rubber colony's base of operations.

All these are problems that can be foreseen in advance and probably conquered.

There are others of a subtler nature, but just as serious.

To begin with, according to accounts from Para, capital of the state of the same name, in which the Detroit multimillionaire's 6,000,000 acres are situated, Ford has been granted authority to rule the tract absolutely—not only to cultivate and develop it and to administer it economically entirely to suit himself, but to govern it generally—to police it and run it politically.

Now, rubber culture in primitive countries has notoriously been attended in the past by frightful inhumanities to these countries' native inhabitants—and it has already been announced that Ford will depend on native labor, except as to bosses and technical experts.

Of course there is no suspicion that Henry Ford would countenance the ill-treatment of natives in his new "sphere of influence," but it is a commonplace that big business' home-staying managements do not always know all that their subordinates are doing in distant parts of the world, where their power is unlimited.

At least, watchful eyes are sure to be kept on the prospective field of rubber exploitation, and there are bound to be Brazilian politicians who will not hesitate to make the most of any unpleasant rumors they may hear—or possibly manufacture.

It is also unfortunately true that native labor in tropical lands is exasperating to foreign overseers almost to the point, as it doubtless frequently seems to the latter, of justifying reprisals.

The worker in such an environment is not under the necessity, as in a less kindly climate, of toiling to live.

He can lie under a tree and catch his food in his lap as it falls from the branches. He needs no shelter and next to no clothes. Wages are of little importance to him. Unwilling to work at all, he quits at the drop of the hat. No agreement binds him. Labor, at best, is not very plentiful in Brazil and its independence is something beyond exaggeration from Detroit indicate an impression that the Ford enterprises' high pay will convert the Brazilians to regular employment.

It is more than questionable. Aside from the fact that high pay is not much more of an inducement than low pay to a man who prefers not to work at any rate, the difference between the living standard is low, than in the United States. It is, to be sure, above the local rate, but the Ford management's policy, as explicitly expressed, is not to maintain American figures in parts of the world where they would be "ridiculous."

Brazil is a land of agitators. The difference between the earnings of a mechanic in a Detroit factory and a Ford plantation hand on the Amazon assuredly will be brought to the plantation hand's attention, and if it does nothing else, it will make him jealous.

During a residence of six years in South America I had an opportunity to observe several North American business ventures into the tropics—Paraguay, the northern Argentine and the Bolivian lowlands—and not one of them ended in anything but disaster.

True, they were not of the same proportions as the Ford experiment, but one of them—in Paraguay—ran to an investment exceeding $20,000,000.

Starting with cattle raising in the early days of the war, when meat was bringing unheard of prices, it expanded until its ranges covered hundreds of thousands of acres, until it had built two large packing plants, until it had engaged in a general importing and exporting business, until its offices and warehouses covered dozens of blocks in Asuncion, Concepcion, Puerto Pinasco and other Paraguayan river towns, until it owned several ocean-going ships, carrying its products—and wound up, in half a decade, in bankruptcy, paying a few cents on the dollar.

It had the reputation of being well-managed, too, with plenty of locally experienced experts among its advisors, and the best talent from the "states" in charge of its efficiency.

But it simply never made money. It was always just about to do so—with the expenditure of another million or so—but it never accomplished it.

The peculiar human equation is what seems to beat the North American on the southern continent. The European has the faculty of adapting himself to it—the Briton, the German, the Scandinavian, the Slav, the Turk and especially the Latin—but the Yankee almost never.

NOW HE KNOWS

Elaine was very rich and William was poor. She liked him, but that was all, and he was well aware of the fact. One evening he was strangely silent and at last he said: "You're very wealthy aren't you, Elaine?"

"Well, William, I'm worth about four million."

"Will you marry me, Elaine?"

"I know it."

"Then why did you ask me?"

"I just wanted to know how a man felt when he lost four millions."

Ding! Ding! A Bell!

"Bob, oh, Bob," shrilled wife. Listen! Don't you hear that bell? Surely we must be near the shore! In a little while the humans will be going into a white house where there is music. Don't you remember how last summer we used to fly from the clover field to perch upon the window sill and listen when the Two-Legs sang and one of them moved his fingers up and down and made beautiful noises, as if all the birds in the land were giving a concert at once?"

"I knew wife meant a church," I heard the Two-Legs call it that—and the thing that the human moved fingers over and made such sweet sounds was an organ—I knew that, too. For a moment I thought wife was right. And then I realized what time it was.

"But wife, the Two-Legs do not go to church before day-break," I said. "That which you hear can't be a church bell. Besides a church bell rings and then stops and this bell rings right on and on and on."

"So it did! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Such a doomy sound as it was too, out there in the darkness, not a bit like the happy ringing of the bell in the old white church at home. Now it was low, now loud. Then for a little while we would not hear it. We thought we had left whatever it was far behind when suddenly it came mournfully booming again over the water."

and are headed straight for the open sea."

"I didn't feel very jolly myself, but I knew quite well it would never do to let wife know it. There was no telling what she might have done. I was trying to think of something comforting to say when suddenly I remembered something and I laughed out loud."

"When wife at last made up her mind that it was not a church bell as she had at first thought it must be, she became as gloomy as she had been glad."

"Oh dear, oh dear! sighed she. I do wish that horrid old ringing would stop. It makes me feel as if I had lost my last chance of seeing the dear old field again. Bob, do you suppose we are ever going to reach land? Perhaps we have lost our course."

OVERCOME HUDSON-ESSEX TO COLLECT SOFTBALL PENNANT

Long Winning Streak Puts Team Over In Circuit

The Carroll-Binder Co. softball team clinched the championship of the American League for the 1928 season by outclassing the Hudson-Essex nine 12 to 3 Tuesday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

The victory brought the winning streak of the league champions to eight straight games, remarkable in the face of the fact this team was not rated as one of the contenders at the start of the season.

The Carroll-Binder Co. will meet the winner of the race in the National League in a post-season series, probably of three games, to decide the 1928 city softball championship.

Neville pitched Carroll-Binder Co. to the championship of its league. Assisted at all times by fast fielding, Neville held the enemy scoreless for four innings. In the fifth he was nicked for two runs and a home run by Fred McCarran with the bases empty in the eighth accounted for the third try.

Carroll-Binder scored two or more runs in each of the first four rounds off "Stony" Fuller, Hudson-Essex twirler, and won an easy victory.

The Harness Cigars, leaders in the National League, wind up their season against the Firemen Wednesday night in an important game. Harness can clinch the league title by a victory.

Hudson-Essex lineup: Herr, 3b; Crowell, 2b; McCarran, cf; Miller, c; Houk, 1b; Leveck, rf; R. Smith, lf; T. Smith, ss; Fuller, p.

DURNBAUGH LEADING RACE FOR STICK HONORS AMONG RESERVES

Durnbaugh, who is showing the way in the race for individual batting honors this season on the Reserve baseball team, raised his average four points to a mark of .428 by singling twice in four times at bat last Sunday.

If reports are correct, the slugging Reserve center fielder will be given a try-out by the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League during the spring training season in 1929.

The team batting average remained stationary at .310 over Sunday. Batting records follow:

PROFESSIONALS IN CHARGE OF OX-ROAST; BOOK CIRCUS ACTS

Electric light poles are being erected by The Dayton Power and Light Co., and booths are being installed at Cox Memorial Athletic Field in preparation for the ox roast and carnival, scheduled for Tuesday, August 28, beginning at 5:30 p. m., as a feature of the Home-Coming.

Six professional vaudeville acts have been engaged from the Gus Sun Amusement Co. of Springfield for the carnival, insuring first class entertainment. The acts will be staged on a large platform, in the process of erection in the center of the athletic field.

Ten oxen will be led to the slaughter for the ox-roast, it is disclosed. Captain Frank Feighley, Columbus, and a crew of eight men will be in charge of preparation of the meat. Captain Feighley is a professional in this line, having put on thousands of barbecues in all parts of the country.

He will bring along complete equipment, including steel pits and will start cooking the meat at 4 a. m. on the day of the ox-roast.

The services of more men and women will be required for the ox-roast and all persons willing to assist those in charge of the affair are asked to attend a meeting at Home-Coming headquarters at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night.

Becky Beall, the big, black mare, which has been raced with success since her purchase by J. C. Mitchell, Mechanicsburg, O., in 1925 during the Columbus O. Grand Circuit meet, where she was given her record by the noted driver, Thomas W. Murphy, is made the subject of a long article by Edwin T. Keller, sport scribe.

Becky Beall showed rare form in the recent Green County Fair meet, winning a stake race in an apparent easy manner and lowering the track record of the course to 2:06 1/2. The article follows:

Becky Beall was purchased in the fall of her three-year-old form from Trainer Tommy Murphy for the meager price of $1,800 by J. C. ("Jim") Mitchell, of Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Last season Becky demonstrated on several occasions that she was a pacer of more than ordinary ability, but at that time one ever thought for a minute that some day she would be classed among the 2:00 possibilities, but that is just what she is today.

Her first race of the 1928 season, in the $25,000 Page Dairy 2:08 pace at Toledo, was something of a disappointment, but that can be taken off the books, as the mare apparently was not up to a grueling race that day. Just a week later she was a close second to the great horse, Louise Direct (2:02 1/4), who was separately timed at the Toledo race in 1:58 3/4, at Kalamazoo. In her next start, at Mansfield, she simply ran off from a good field of pacers, winning with plenty in reserve. She was then taken to Xenia, Ohio, where she had another stake engagement, meeting there Patchen Boy (2:06 1/4) and Mose Direct (2:06 1/2), but there was nothing to it but Becky, she turning in her opening mile in 2:06 1/2 for a brand-new track record, not being extended until the final run through the stretch. From Xenia she was taken to Wilmington, where she again staked up against Patchen Boy, Mose Direct and several more, but again there was nothing to it but Becky, she romping off with the second heat in 2:05 1/4, lowering the track record a full second and a half, and had the track been in first class condition that day many were of the opinion that the black mare would have paced the half-mile track there in 2:04.

The mare will be raced carefully from now until the fall meeting at Lexington, where her owner-trainer-driver, if conditions are favorable, will start her in an attempt to lower her record and place her name in the famous 2:00 group, and many of the critics are of the opinion that if Becky retains her present form, she will turn the trick. Should she pace in two minutes, her dam, Roy McKinney (2:07 1/2), will be the first producer in the history of the harness horse sport credited with having three two-minute performers, and it will also place her sire, Peter Scott (2:05), second only to Guy Axworthy (4:20 3/4), as a sire of two-minute performers. Guy Axworthy having four to his credit.

The mare has stake engagements at Columbus, Indianapolis, Louisville and Lexington, after which she will be taken home by her owner-trainer, given a thorough rest this winter and then will be fitted for the big pacing stakes over eastern tracks during the 1929 season, with the Windsor Derby at Windsor, Conn., as her objective.

To date her owner has refused several flattering offers for his six-year-old, but has politely turned them aside, he having but one price on the mare, and if he can not realize that he will continue to pay all bills on her, and he should not worry if they do not purchase Becky, for with her demonstrated racing qualities and bred as she is, she will be worth a king's ransom as a brood mare, for she comes from one of the best line of families that the trotting sport boasts of, the Peter the Great and McKinney.

MILLER HUGGINS

Miller J. Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, was born in Cincinnati, O., March 27, 1880. At 19 years of age Hug began his professional career with Marshfield, O. He lasted just one season, when he was grabbed by St. Paul, which club in turn turned him over to Cincinnati, in 1904.

Huggins played with the Reds until 1910, when the St. Louis Cardinals got him in a trade. Appointed manager he functioned as Card boss, rather unsuccessfully, until 1917.

The season of 1917 saw Huggins taking over the reins of the Yankees. His success since has been remarkable. He won pennants for New York in 1921, 1922, 1923, 1926, 1927 and now has what is called the greatest club baseball ever saw.

The party had ended, so far as they all were concerned. It had sobered Maxine and the boys as much as it had Janet.

"Funny town when that kind of stuff can go on," Bob remarked, savagely, when Janet joined them at the table.

Maxine shook her head.

"Poor little baby! Why don't God send them where they are wanted?"

Janet could not help noticing the look in Bob's eyes, as he held Maxine's wrap for her. How she hoped they would wake up. What a fine husband Bob would make for poor little unhappy Maxine.

Janet was worn out.

For weeks she had been playing in one show every night, and rehearsing in "Blue Laws of 1928," practically all day. A great deal of the joy of her coming success was taken away because Ballard thoroughly disapproved of the type of show she was being starred in.

He tried to point out to her that it would only harm her reputation to capitalize on her father's publicity, but she was adamant. There was no way out. She had signed her contract and she was bitter enough to go through with it.

Meanwhile nothing was being left undone to advertise the coming revival campaign at the Garfield and nothing undone to get publicity for her. The tabloids ate the story up and cried for more. Janet was somewhat annoyed at times when they painted her a trifle too notoriously. But, Goldstein pointed out, it meant fame. And fame meant dollars.

Ballard Riley was thoroughly worried. He could not understand why he seemed to take Janet's career so to heart.

Why should he always leave Janet's studio with a feeling of regret that he was unable to analyze?

Although Janet tried very hard to hide her real feeling, her love for him was shown in every word she said. When she looked at him with that young face so full of worship and adoration, he wanted to turn away from it.

It worried him when he thought of breaking away from her entirely. It would have to be done. Things couldn't go on like that forever. Of course, he realized it would be difficult to break with her. Not only did he fear she would take it to heart—but she had grown very dear to him. That he did not deny to himself. After all, she was very desirable—and beautiful.

Ballard was a man of the world. He had seen the raw and a man of that sort is liable to hide his real feelings, even from himself, under a coat of what he considers worldly understanding. He felt he knew life too well to be touched by it. That he had been a ringside seat observer—but that the show could never touch him.

He decided, because he was disturbed that he was seeing Janet too much. And that he must break from her gradually. It would not be easy. But the step was a necessary one.

Janet grew a little hysterical at times when she thought of the future. She hung onto his every word for some little sign that his feeling for her was a lasting one—but so far there was nothing that she could base any future hope on.

He was devoted, the divine lover but always he kept before her by some slight remark the thought that he could never mean any more to her than he did.

She closed her eyes at times and felt ill all over. Never, never must she break down and let him know that he meant more to her than her life. She would be a good sport. She would not be a silly foolish girl. He told her she was a woman—the best sport he had ever seen, and she would live up to it. If it killed her—withered her soul, she would never, never betray her feelings again.

She would go on making him think she had forgotten all about the night he told her he loved her, and she loved him so.

He had only seen her once the week before the show opened. So it was that she went into the dressing room that night with a heart that ached until she felt it must break in two. Was he drifting away? Tired of her?

Florence Desly's eyes narrowed as Janet came into the theater. That brat starring in a show that Goldstein had only given her a small bit in! It was the bitterest pill she had ever been called upon to swallow.

Janet tried to be happy. But she could summon little response to her effort to appear gay. She checked her desire to close the door and lock it and cry. She must be a trouper! Smile if it killed her, because the crowd would expect it of her. It was a sensational New York opening night—and she was the center of the stage.

CHAPTER XXXI

Janet looked up to see a young girl standing beside her, smiling.

"Whose cute kid—yours?"

"My goodness, no," she replied, savagely. "I would rather die before I'd bring a child into a place like this. He belongs to a man and woman out there. They ought to be shot!"

The girl looked at her curiously, and beat and felt the boy's head.

"Poor little devil, he does look tired. You love kids, don't you?"

Janet's eyes were tender.

"Who could help loving them? Poor little helpless darlings!"

"I got a kid five months old myself," the girl confided, secretly.

Janet was dumbfounded.

"Yeah!" The girl smiled. "Della De Lacy is my stage name. But I'm Mrs. Dennis Kelly in real life. My husband deserted me, though, before my kid was born."

Janet's heart went out in sympathy.

"Oh, honey, I'm so sorry. And you're all alone?"

"Vastly alone and the little sweetest heart. He's cunning enough to eat, though, and I ain't kidding you."

"I'm sure he is," Janet was touched. "May I see him some time?"

The girl's face broke into a happy smile.

"Oh, do you really want to? Gee, he's sweet."

She gave her address, and Janet promised faithfully that she would drop in some afternoon the next week.

The party had ended, so far as they all were concerned. It had sobered Maxine and the boys as much as it had Janet.

"Funny town when that kind of stuff can go on," Bob remarked, savagely, when Janet joined them at the table.

Maxine shook her head.

The Theater

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—Perhaps she'll be the second exception to prove the rule that fame is no stepping stone to motion picture stardom.

Ruth Elder, working in the picture, "Moran of the Marines," has registered a decided hit with all hands at the Paramount studio.

She has won executives, directors and laymen to her. She films well and if only she clicks at the spread accounts of her attempted trans-Atlantic flight when she first came to Hollywood.

Now she likes the pictures and she desires to remain here.

Among the most notable flops of notables of other lines was Jack Dempsey. Even a remodeled nose didn't make him a motion picture hero.

As far as that goes, Gene Tunney, Babe Ruth and Charlie Paddock weren't bargains in the acting line.

Gertrude Ederle swam the English channel and then played a role in one picture.

George Young won William Wrigley Jr.'s, famous ocean marathon across Catalina channel but after a screen test Paramount advised him to stick to water.

Twenty Years '08- Ago -'28

The first annual V. M. C. A. picnic, which occurred at Neff Park, was a great success in every particular.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Eavey arrived home from a visit at Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nash left for Petoskey, where they will sojourn while the hay fever germ holds forth in this section.

The work of decorating Xenia for the Home-Coming is starting and promises to be widespread and elaborate. The Xenia National Bank and Jobe Bros. store show up beautifully.

Fulfilling a 30-minute broadcasting engagement in New York, Aug. 19, necessitates 3,000 miles of airplane travel for Miss Suzanne Keener, whose home is in San Francisco. She was "discovered" by a music lover, while singing in the streets of Pittsburgh, during a Liberty Loan drive. After eight months of study she was given a contract with the Metropolitan Opera company.

box office she has an excellent chance of becoming a permanent member of the screen colony.

Not since Harold "Red" Grange trod briefly through cinema-land has any much publicized person been so favorably received as Miss Elder.

Grange filmed well and critics generally agreed that he had a motion picture career at his calling. He took another course but contracts probably still remain open to him.

Just as Grange was realizing on his fame as a football player, Miss Elder was depending on wide-

MARIETTA MAN TO HEAD WILMINGTON

WILMINGTON, O., Aug. 22.—Prof. B. O. Skinner, for fourteen years superintendent of Marietta city schools, has been elected president of Wilmington College here, it was announced by the college board of trustees today.

Prof. Skinner will assume his duties here late in September. He still has one year to serve at his Marietta position, but will be released there as soon as the fall school term opens, it was announced here.

The successor of the late Dr. Henry G. Williams holds degrees from Chicago University and Ohio University, and has studied at Ohio State.

brings quick and lasting relief in troubles of the stomach, liver, kidney and bowels, and in stubborn cases of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Mr. W. R. Clark, South Miami Avenue, Xenia, is well and happy again after years of suffering from stomach trouble, and he looked years younger than his 65 years when he came to the Gallaher store to tell the Konjola Man his wonderful experience with this amazing compound. Mr. Clark said:

"I am 65 years old, but I feel many years younger since taking Konjola. It is hard to believe that any medicine could do what this wonderful compound accomplished in my case. Many years ago my stomach trouble developed, and became constantly worse, though I tried everything to help me. What I did manage to eat formed gas that caused bloating and almost unbearable pains. I belched up quantities of undigested food in a sour and burning liquid. Pains kept me from sound sleep. Naturally, with improper digestion, constant pains and loss of sleep I became weaker day by day, year after year.

"I realized that something had to be found that would give me permanent relief, but not until I tried Konjola did I find the right medicine. Konjola went right to the spot, as the Konjola Man said it would. I felt an improvement immediately, and as I proceeded with the treatment I could feel the indigestion leaving. My pains disappeared, appetite returned and with it strength and health. Now I sleep soundly and eat anything I like. And when I think of the years I suffered I keenly regret that I did not know of Konjola long ago. I will be glad to verify this statement personally to anyone who suffers, without hope, as I did."

Konjola is a compound of 32 ingredients, each of time-tested medicinal value, and each has its duty to perform in cleansing, purifying, stimulating and restoring the affected organs. All work at once; that is why Konjola brings quick, lasting results. This new medicine contains no nerve deadening drugs, no hard depressant. It is not to give temporary, passing relief, but permanent results. To those who suffer Konjola offers abundant hope; what this master medicine has done for others it will do for you.

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, 33 East Main Street, Xenia, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.

WILSON'S WRATH

Talk Of Separate Peace Stirred President's Ire At Conference

WOODROW WILSON

(This is another of a series of stories about former presidents and their wives, termed "In Memory's Portrait Gallery" by the writer, Idah McGlone Gibson. Mrs. Gibson personally interviewed the persons of whom she writes in such an entertaining manner.)

By IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON
Especially Written for Central Press and Gazette

The day before the peace treaty was signed, President Wilson received the American credited correspondents in one of the parlors of the Hotel Crillon.

We were assembled when the president came in. He was looking pale and wan, but the familiar smile lighted his face as he leaned against the wall, facing about by the writer, Idah McGlone Gibson. Only three of these were women.

The president remarked that he was at our mercy—with his back against the wall—and then the questions began.

That morning American cables had carried the news that Senator Albert B. Fall, of New Mexico (later in the oil lease scandals), had proposed that we scrap the peace treaty and enter into a separate peace with Germany, and one of the men (I think it was Wm.

G. Sheppard, press association correspondent) asked: "Mr. President, what do you think of the peace proposal?"

THE PRESIDENT IS TOLD

Turning quickly to the questioner, the president said he had not heard of it as he had not seen the papers that morning.

A dozen eager voices offered explanation.

It was then, for the first time, that I saw President Wilson angry. His hands, which were hanging loosely at his sides, were clenched so tightly that his knuckles showed a bluish-white. His face was suffused with a red that became almost purple before it died away into its accustomed pallor.

He forced himself to smile as he said, "I think I can best say what I think of it by telling you a story. 'When I was a boy, the town in which I lived had a way of disposing of its garbage by hauling it up a long, steep hill and burning it in a place outside the city limits.'

WILSON'S OPINION OF HIM

"The man who drove the garbage wagon was the most profane man I ever knew. We boys used to follow him just to hear his pyrotechnic English as he urged his laboring horses up the hill where he rested the sweating animals a few minutes before they again resumed their way to the disposal site.

"One day we decided upon a brilliant idea. Watching our chance we lifted the loose wooden strip which acted as tailboard to the rickety wagon and then we crept behind him up the hill expecting to hear something more wonderfully profane than we ever had heard before.

"Slowly he ascended the hill without so much picturesque English as usual for as the horses hauled the wagon up the steep grade, a path of foul smelling garbage was left and the load grew lighter.

"Reaching the summit of the hill he got off his seat and looking back he saw that shining path strewn with garbage.

"For a moment he stood silent and then with a groan he said despairingly 'There ain't no words.'"

WOMAN HURT WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

Miss Rachel Dice, Elm St., is recovering from painful injuries to the left knee sustained when she was knocked down by an auto driven by William Ringer, son of John Ringer, Cincinnati Ave., at "Five Points" about 9:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

The driver stopped after the accident and took her home, where an examination has convinced Miss Dice she received a dislocation of the knee. A physician was not summoned.

Miss Dice was walking from W. Second St. to Cincinnati Ave. when she was struck by the auto, which was traveling north on Cincinnati Ave.

SENTENCED HERE FOR NON-SUPPORT

Harry M. Bennett, this city, was given a suspended sentence of ninety days in the County Jail and fined the costs by Acting Probate Judge R. L. Gowdy when he pleaded guilty to a non-support charge Tuesday afternoon.

The affidavit was filed by his wife, Sallie A. Bennett, who charged her husband with failure to support his family from June 21 to August 17. They have three children, Amanda, 12, John Oscar, 8, and Marjorie, 4.

The court suspended the jail sentence when Bennett agreed to pay $5 per week toward his family's support.

Bennett was arrested at 504 S. Jefferson St., Dayton, by Detectives Herman Ague and Herb Gallor Monday night and was returned to Xenia Tuesday by Probation Officer J. E. Watts.

OLD GOLD bats 1000% as Hornsby takes the Blindfold cigarette test

Rogers Hornsby, capable manager of the Boston Braves... captain of the 1927 New York Giants... manager of the 1926 St. Louis Cardinals, who won the World's Series.

Ms. Hornsby was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands, clearing his taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked... "Which one do you like best?"

Made from the heart-leaves of the tobacco plant

"They say 'there's not a cough in a carload' of OLD GOLDS.

"But I can tell you there's a home-run hit in every cool mouthful.

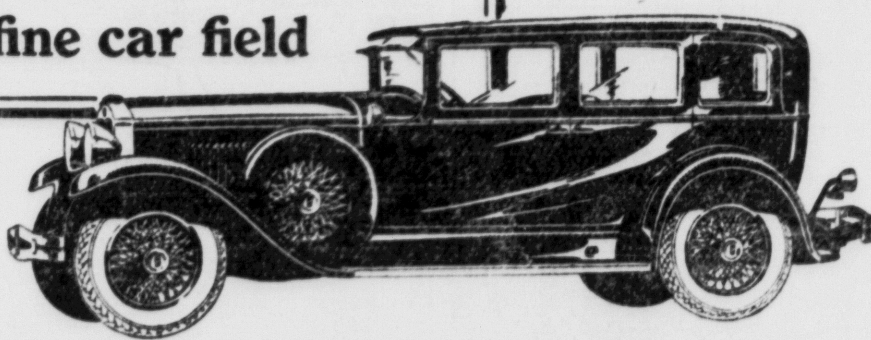

"For no other cigarette, of the four leading brands in the blindfold test, could compare with OLD GOLDS for pure pleasure to taste, tongue and throat."
